NATIONAL EDUCATION DELEGATES PROMISE RECORD ATTENDANCE

Latest Advices Indicate 55,000 Visitors to Come, a Far Larger Crowd Than Was Originally Expected.

ROOMS IN DEMAND

Train Accommodations From Chicago Fast Being Restricted and No Berths at All on June 30.

Latest advices show that the attendance at the National Education Association convention in July will be much greater than originally estimated. It is thought today that the number of registrations will reach 55,000, said Lincoln Owen, who is chairman of the accommodations committee and who has charge of housing the delegates and guests during the convention.

The executive committee today issued a tabular report comprising schedules of all the sessions of the National Education Association convention showing where and when the regular meetings will be held.

Latest returns indicate that more teachers are coming from the West than was expected. It is impossible now to get berths on trains leaving Chicago for Boston on June 30, and accommodations on the trains from Chicago to Boston during the last days of June and first days of July are fast being booked by convention delegates from the West.

More requests for bulletins and information about the convention have been received at headquarters this year than at the time of the convention seven years ago, Mr. Owen said, and it is confidently believed that the convention will be as largely attended as the former one when 55,000 were registered.

The accommodations committee, working under Mr. Owen, have arranged rooms for about 15,000 people, including quarters at city and suburban hotels, lodging houses and private dwellings. The committee is seeking to divert as many people as possible to the suburbs, especially Cambridge and Brookline.

Assignments to rooms are not being made for the teachers in advance. The delegates will choose their rooms on arriving in the city with the assistance of the accommodations committee, the early comers getting the first choice. All the rooms have been recommended as suitable for occupancy.

Each state will have a special headquarters at some city hotel. A printed list will be made of the state headquarters which will be kept at the convention headquarters in the old art museum building.

Mrs. Emma Gulliver of the Dillaway school, Roxbury, chairman of the assignment committee, who is in charge of the work of looking up rooms outside the larger hotels, estimates that she has secured accommodations for 9000, and will arrange lodgings for many more before the convention opens.

Fifty rooms in the Franklin Square House and the three dormitories of the New England Conservatory of Music have been secured. The latter places have accommodations for about 300.

The suburbs have been searched for rooms and it is expected that at least 2500 persons will be housed in Cambridge. Winthrop and Revere will get at least 300 each, while Allston, Brighton, Roxbury, Dorchester, South Boston, Jamaica Plain and other nearby suburbs will get their share.

ILLINOIS BRIBE CASE NEAR END.

CHICAGO—State's Attorney Wayman is today closing the prosecution in the trial of Lee O'Neil Browne, Democratic minority leader of the Illinois Legislature, for the alleged bribery of Representative White to vote for William Lorimer for United States senator. The defense rested its case Thursday.

SCHOOLHOUSE BOARD CHANGES CAUSED BY NEED FOR ARCHITECT

The appointment of Charles Bruen Perkins, an architect, as a member of the schoolhouse commission and the resignation of Edward R. Gregory, which occurred today, is the result of the attitude of the civil service commission which informed Mayor Fitzgerald that it could not see its way clear to confirm Charles H. Logue unless an architect be made a member of the schoolhouse board. Mr. Gregory consequently tendered his resignation.

Charles Bruen Perkins, who has offices in Ashburton place, was born in Florence, Italy, in 1860. He came to this country for his early education, preparing for Harvard at St. Pauls school in Concord. He was graduated from Harvard University in the class of 1883 and also spent one year at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He spent five years in study in Paris, one of which was at the Academie des Beaux Arts. On his return to America he entered the office of Peabody & Stearns, architects, and in 1892 opened an office of his own.

Mr. Gregory was appointed to the schoolhouse commission by former Mayor Hibbard one year ago.

Mr. Gregory was at the city hall this forenoon but failed to see the mayor, who was out.

TRUST PROBE TO PROCEED AT ONCE

CHICAGO—"The investigation and prosecution of the beef trust will go ahead," declared Attorney-General Wickersham today, when asked what effect Judge Landis' action Thursday in sustaining the packers' demurrer would have.

"Asst. Atty.-Gen. Oliver E. Pagin, who drew the indictment held by the court to be incomplete, will return to Chicago tomorrow and set about the preparation of a new bill against the packers."

From statements made by the attorney-generall it seems likely that the packers will be prosecuted next time as individuals. Referring to the railway rate bill, Mr. Wickersham said that it was an excellent law.

Investigations Under Way by Department of Justice

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Wickersham, in a letter to Chairman Tawney of the House appropriations committee detailing the activities of the department of justice in the last year against alleged illegal combinations, makes the following significant statement:

"In addition to the proceedings indicated in these two statements there are quite a number of investigations now being carried on by this department which have not yet reached a stage when any public statement can be made concerning them consistent with the public interest."

CATCH LARGEST MACKEREL FARE

The largest mackerel fare to reach T wharf this season came in today on the steamer Bessie M. Dugan. The Dugan caught 12,000 of the fish on Pollock rip Thursday night. Her fare was eagerly snapped up at 22 cents apiece, stocking the vessel $2640 for a nights' work.

RAILROAD MAN LEAVES $17,000,000.

BETHLEHEM, Pa.—Under the will of Elisha P. Wilbur, former president of the Lehigh Valley railroad, an estate of $17,000,000 is bequeathed to his family. So far as known there is no gift to a public or a charitable institution.

TEACHERS SAIL ON NUMIDIAN.

A number of New England teachers sailed for Europe today on the Allan liner Numidian, Captain Moor, which left Mystic wharves at 11 a. m. for Glasgow. The steamer took out 170 cabin passengers and about 100 steerage.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL ADVOCATES FEDERAL CONTROL OF STOCKS

Mr. Wickersham Declares the Reckless Issue of Securities Is As Demoralizing as Lotteries Are.

ADDRESS IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO—Declaring that the reckless issue of railroad stocks and bonds is as demoralizing to the public as lotteries, Attorney-General Wickersham made an argument in favor of federal regulation and control of all railroad issues, in an address before the Illinois Bar Association here today.

He contended that such federal control was an essential part of the government's supervision of interstate commerce and presented numerous quotations from supreme court decisions to support his arguments. He discussed at length the technical legal phases of the proposition.

"Economists and courts alike," he said, "have condemned the reckless issue of stock and bonds by railroad companies without adequate consideration, which has come to be generally regarded as an evil, certainly as demoralizing in its effect upon the public as the carriage of lottery tickets from one state to another.

"The 20 years period of railroad receiverships and foreclosures, the reports of which fill many volumes of reports of decisions of the federal courts, testifies eloquently to the practical effect of such unwarranted issues of securities upon the ability of railroad companies to properly perform their functions as instrumentalities of interstate commerce; while the utterance of stock for inadequate or fictitious consideration has furnished the opportunity for the most irresponsible and speculative control of these highways of commerce, and has resulted in the injury which always follows a control of property by those who have no real investment in it.

"Such control, all experience shows, will not be generally exercised in the interest of the road, and to insure such safe conservative management as is necessary to meet the requirement of the public by the proper discharge of the obligations imposed upon the carrier by law.

"On the contrary, it is almost inevitable that such control be employed for purely speculative purposes and to secure immediate profit to those in temporary control. It is this public aspect which lends force to the conviction that 'watered' and 'bonus' stock is one of the greatest abuses connected with the management of corporations, and it is this effect upon the fitness of the carriers to perform their duties under national legislation that requires and justifies federal supervision and control of the subject."

The attorney-general argued that legislation to secure such control was plainly within the constitutional power of Congress. He pointed out that the extent of the obligations which a carrier might incur had a direct effect upon the determination of the reasonableness of transportation rates, and that the work of the interstate commerce commission would be greatly facilitated if, before stocks and bonds were issued, the consideration therefor were ascertained by the commission to be full and adequate. "The great arteries of communication," he concluded, "can be properly regulated in the public interest by a central national power, which should be exercised to correct every evil of a public character."

WEEKS FOREST BILL FILIBUSTER GOES ON AFTER SHORT TRUCE

WASHINGTON—With the defeat of the House amendment to the sundry civil bill which proposed to exempt labor unions from the operation of the Sherman anti-trust law, the energies of Congress were today devoted to the Weeks White mountain-Appalachian forest reservation bill, and both the Senate and the House met at 10 a. m. to rush legislation for an early adjournment. This is now definite and is predicted anywhere from tomorrow to the middle of next week.

For two hours today in the Senate there was truce and then the forest bill filibuster was renewed. Senator Crane had a long interview with Mr. Burton (Rep., O), head of the opposition to the bill, with a view to calling off the filibuster, but he made no progress. In resuming his long speech, Mr. Burton said that the importance of the measure demanded full debate and expressed surprise that the opposition had been characterized as a filibuster.

The action of the House late Thursday in receding from its attitude on the labor question followed a day of the utmost activity by the President in opposition to the amendment. Mr. Taft had declared that if it cost him the support of every laboring man in the country, he could not favor any action that savored of class legislation. He telegraphed a long reply to a protest sent to him from the convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen at St. Paul in which in substance he said he believed that "the laboring man and the trades unionist, if I understand him, asks only equality before the law."

Early this morning the invited guests began to arrive and long before the Sanders theater exercises began at 11 o'clock the yard was filled with prettily gowned women and young graduates with vari-colored hatbands. The senior in dark robe and mortarboard was much in evidence escorting friends to points of interest or hastening to attend the many senior exercises.

At 9 o'clock the senior class assembled in front of Holworthy hall and, led by First Marshal Robert C. Brown of Medford, marched to Appleton chapel.

Prayer was offered by Prof. George H. Palmer and the full chapel choir rendered several selections.

The class ode by Thomas Stearns Eliot of St. Louis was sung to the tune of "Fair Harvard."

Then came an intermission of several hours which was occupied by numerous spreads given by fraternities, clubs and individual seniors.

News of the World Told by Cable and Correspondence

ARMY MANEUVERS IN GERMANY WILL BE HELD IN AUTUMN

(Special to The Monitor.)

BERLIN—The Emperor will, as usual, be present at the imperial army maneuvers, which are announced to take place from Sept. 8 to 10, in the neighborhood of Konigsberg and Dantzig on the Baltic sea. Although the maneuvers will not be carried out on quite so large a scale as in 1908, they will be of special interest, since the army will cooperate with the fleet, and the most up-to-date methods of communication will be utilized.

The aerial fleet, consisting of dirigibles of the Zeppelin, the Gross and the Parseval types, together with aeroplanes of the Wright type, as well as some of German design and manufacture, will be used for reconnoitering purposes.

Wireless telegraphy and telephony will also be utilized to enable the commanders to keep in touch with the various branches of the army and the airships, in addition to which, automobiles will be requisitioned for the purpose of facilitating the transport of officers from one point to another.

It is stated that, in addition to the regular troops serving in the German army, numbering 621,112 officers and men, no less than 356,882 reservists will be called up to serve with the colors for a period this season. The total number of soldiers under arms will, therefore, amount to 977,994, although they will not all take part in the imperial maneuvers.

PLANT RUBBER IN EAST INDIES

(Special to The Monitor.)

LONDON—The British consular report on the trade of Goa contains some interesting information concerning the planting of rubber trees in that quiet corner of the East Indies. "In 1908," the report states, "an experimental plantation of Para and Ceara rubber trees was started by the government, and the experience, up to the present, is promising. The trees, two years after the date of sowing, are healthy and have gained a height above the average for their age.

"Some experiments have been made with manures and that with fish manure has shown that the growth is very rapid under this treatment. Ceara trees treated with fish manure will, judging from their size today, reach maturity at three years instead of four to six years and their condition appears in every respect to be strong and flourishing." In this connection it may be noted that fish manure was applied to toddy palms in the early days of the British in India.

NEED SERVANTS IN NEW ZEALAND

(Special to The Monitor.)

WELLINGTON, N. Z.—There is great demand for domestic servants in the Dominion and with the view to inducing the prime minister to take some steps to alleviate the situation, a deputation of housekeepers waited upon him. As the results of the arguments put forward Sir Joseph Ward has promised that the fare of young women leaving Great Britain for the Dominion with the object of taking up domestic service, shall be reduced.

CANADIAN LUMBER MEN COMBINE AND WILL LOWER PRICE

(Special to The Monitor.)

VANCOUVER, B. C.—Some of the largest saw-milling companies on the Canadian Pacific coast are uniting to organize a company for the purpose of establishing lumber yards in the provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, in order to counteract the present high prices maintained by existing yards, and which it is claimed are destroying the demand.

The projected company will benefit all the mill owners who desire to join the enterprise, as well as the consumers in the provinces named, to whom it is intended to furnish lumber at from $1 to $4 per thousand less than is now charged. It is expected to establish 50 yards this season, which number will eventually be increased to 500.

By this plan the manufacturers will be able to move their lumber at the most favorable time for handling by the railroads, and could maintain large stocks in their prairie yards at less cost than when kept in their own mill yards on the coast. The plan is being indorsed by the principal coast companies.

GERMANS PROTEST AGAINST RECKLESS DRIVING OF AUTOS

(Special to The Monitor.)

BERLIN—Continual complaints are being made by the inhabitants of the country districts as to the behavior of motor-car drivers. It is said that they drive recklessly through the country, ignoring both the safety and the comfort of the inhabitants. So loud is the voice of the public on this question at the present moment that the matter was made the subject of some forcible remarks in the lower house of the Prussian Diet recently. Members from the Center, the National Liberal party, and the Conservative party are expressing in forcible language their views of the situation.

While, however, he admitted that the behavior of automobilists was not always what could be desired, Herr Rochling pointed out that the great majority of motor-car users were honorable and considerate men, and that it would not be reasonable to hold such men responsible for what was the unseemly behavior of a few. Referring to the motor-car traffic in London, Herr Rochling pointed out that while the speed allowed was considerably in excess of that permitted in German towns, the standard of driving in London was much higher, and he maintained that the authorities in Germany should take steps to insure the better training of chauffeurs in this country.

Celebrating Argentine Centenary

(Special Correspondence of The Monitor.)

BUENOS AIRES—The day, the eventful day, has come and gone and the people of Buenos Aires may justly be congratulated on the magnificent spectacle presented at every one of the events staged with consummate care for the celebration of that great event in the national history of the country, which took place 100 years ago this twenty-fifth day of May and is known as the Revolution of May.

At sunrise, not only in the great city of Buenos Aires itself, but in every town throughout the length and breadth of the country, the appearance of the "Sol de Mayo" was greeted with a discharge of cannon or the letting off of bombs and the glad ringing of bells from every church tower.

At 9 o'clock between 20,000 and 30,000 children were assembled in the great square in front of the Government House around the statue or pyramid of Liberty and, at a given signal, united their voices in singing the Argentine national hymn and saluting the flag of their country.

After the children had withdrawn, the President with his ministers and the foreign delegates accompanied by the Infanta Isabel and President Montt of Chile, assembled in the center of the Plaza to lay the foundation stone of the monument to the revolution, which, when erected, will be one of the most attractive objects in the city.

The entire press of the city is unanimous in praising the appearance of the bearers of the Star Spangled Banner, to whose lot it fell, in the absence of the representatives of Great Britain, to represent the characters which distinguish the marines of the Anglo-Saxon races.

Following the men of the United States came marines from the French, Spanish, Italian, Dutch, Portuguese, Austrian, German, Uruguayan and Chilean fleets and, finally, marching as one man with an automatic precision which drew upon them the attention of every one came the Japanese, many of whom were heroes of the great naval battle of Tsushima.

The real event of the day, namely, the march past of the Argentine and foreign soldiers and sailors, came early in the afternoon. The place of honor in the procession had been given to the marines from the foreign men-of-war, which had come from all parts of the world to do honor to the rising nation. As these marines marched in the alphabetical order of their countries, the first place was accorded to America, and as the marines from the five American vessels, the Chester, the Tennessee, the Montana, the North Carolina and the Dakota, led by Admiral Staunton, swung past with elastic tread, their fine appearance, splendid physique and martial bearing drew shouts of admiration from the half million people who witnessed the display. Their style of marching, with its free yet stately swing, contrasted strongly with the stiff military tread of some of the navies which followed them.

The total number of foreign marines was about 3000. After them came some 22,000 Argentine soldiers of all arms, whose appearance astonished the assembled multitudes.

In the evening, the city was brilliantly illuminated, although occasional dark patches showed that the electric power necessary for such a grandiose exhibition had been somewhat underestimated. In the evening, also, there was a gala performance at the Opera when Verdi's "Otello" was rendered in a masterly manner by some of the greatest artists of the day.

At this performance, Major-General Wood and Mrs. Wood were conspicuous among the foreign representatives. Altogether, it can only be said that the celebration of the centenary of Argentine liberty has been carried out on a scale and in a manner worthy of the occasion and which augurs well for the forward march of the country in the new centenary that has dawned upon the nation.

NEW METHOD TO TEMPER COPPER AS HARD AS STEEL

VANCOUVER, B. C. — A. Grenier, formerly of this city, has been quietly conducting experiments in Nicola valley where he has erected a smithy and laboratories, and claims to have rediscovered the long lost secret of tempering copper to the hardness of steel. Mr. Grenier is to make further tests in Vancouver and will take up the matter with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, having arranged for an interview with Mr. Marpole, the company's general executive on the coast.

BERLIN'S STREETS USED FOR SKATING

(Special to The Monitor.)

BERLIN—It may be stated without fear of contradiction that Berlin is the cleanest city in the world. There is a general appearance of symmetry and of uniformity in the German capital as a whole, and yet there is no lack of pleasing variety in the aspect of its dwelling houses, of its busy streets, and of its broad thoroughfares. Berliners live in flats. The great blocks of buildings enclose spacious courtyards with, wherever practicable, miniature reproductions of the asphalt-bordered beds of shrubs and trees which, on a larger scale, are the unique characteristics of the beautiful platz, or open central spaces of the town. Berlin is also a practically smokeless city. Peat briquettes, gas, coke and anthracite are responsible for nearly all the heating required, while gas is more generally used in cooking than the less easily manipulated soft coal. There are no smoky chimneys, and no smuts.

A BERLIN ROSE GARDEN.
In the zoological park of what is said to be the world's cleanest city.

The streets are not only surprisingly clean, but are literally never dirty. There are some stone-set roads, and a very occasional wooden one, but three fourths of the road surface is asphalt. As a result the smooth surface of the broad roads is not only kept rigorously clean, but it makes all but the busiest thoroughfares a huge roller skating rink for the young of both sexes. The side paths have a narrow strip of flagstones down the center bordered, as in all the platz gardens, with a mosaic stone in ornamental lines, and starry shapes and figures, define in shades of slate and stone color. An army of scavengers, in neat uniform, work day and night, in alternate shifts, with every sort of clever contrivance to clean thoroughly and effectively.

In those platz in which bi-weekly markets are held among the trees and center plots of shrubs and grass, one may hear the first sounds of the peasant folk erecting their separate sheds and booths in the early morning, and business begins before 8 o'clock. But not the smallest coin's worth may be sold after 1 o'clock. By 2 o'clock the market people with their belongings have vanished from the scene, and their place is taken by the well-trained scavengers. In an hour the rubbish and dirt have disappeared and the trim watercarts have given the first wash down before the busy brooms. Then comes a powerful hose flooding and rinsing everything, until by 5 o'clock no one would guess that a market had been held on the already dry pathways.

Another reason for Berlin's clean streets is the little horse traffic. When a heavy shower, a continuous downpour, make temporary puddles and wet or running surfaces there is still no mud or slime, and one is sure to wake in the morning to find the streets as clean and shining as ever.

In the west center of Berlin is the beautiful Tiergarten, or park, with its grand old trees, shady riding roads, and paths of soft gravel, interlacing the broad, smooth asphalt roads with their numberless statues. The many beautiful platz, where intersecting roadways, and circumambient tramlines, show an expanse of avenues and clumps of flowering trees and shrubs in ornamental grass shapes, carpeted with mosaic stonework, are all connected by broad streets with unbroken lines of beautiful trees, linked with ropes of trailing Virginia creeper, with a broad center gravel path, bordered with sweet-scented flower beds, and including in many cases, riding road avenues on one side. These all make Berlin, in her present garb of summer green, lovely beyond compare.

So fond are the people of flowers and green that not only are front window flower boxes in much evidence, but balconies in gartenhaus seclusion are lined with boxes of trailing vines, and so ubiquitous is the green of floral decoration that there can scarcely be a window in the whole city where the eyes of the closest prisoner are not gladdened by the sight of some bit of summer loveliness.

INCREASE IN BRITISH DEBT OF FIFTY-FIVE MILLION OF DOLLARS

LONDON—There has been an increase of more than $55,000,000 in the national debt during the past year, according to a statement issued by the treasury, the total deadweight debt being roundly $3,566,000,000 on April 1 and the total gross liabilities $3,812,000,000.

These figures are the cause of recrimination among those opposed to what was called the socialistic program of the Lloyd-George budget. The believers in the phantom of a German invasion see only another evidence of the decline of Great Britain.

The country, they assert, is already filled with young men who settle down to a life of sport and who thus live on the resources of the country without adding anything. They have had for the most part no military education and in time of war would be only civilians.

PORTUGAL'S KING TO TAKE ACTION

LISBON—An early culmination in the general unrest throughout Portugal will be precipitated, it is thought today, by King Manuel's decision to inaugurate a practical military dictatorship in consequence of his failure to form a new cabinet. The failure to form the cabinet resulted from the jealousies of numerous leading politicians on whom he had relied for support.

King Manuel has tired of this opposition and is determined to expel from Parliament, by force if necessary, the rioters and obstructionists who have hindered the work of readjustment. The military element of Parliament is being greatly strengthened. The King insists that he has promises of support from enough of the leaders to insure the successful conclusion of his plans.

BRITISH CITY WILL TRAIN GIRLS IN DOMESTIC DUTIES

(Special to The Monitor.)

BRIGHTON, Eng.—A new scheme for the training of girls in domestic duties will come into force next September, with the approval of the Brighton town council. A house has been taken in which boarders, mostly teachers very probably, will be taken, and the work of the house will be carried on under supervision and teaching, by girls who will be sent there for a certain period to learn every branch of domestic work thoroughly and practically.

Blame is often attached to girls and young women for the way in which they perform their domestic duties, but in too many cases they have never been properly trained or taught how this work should be done. This is one of the reasons of the distaste which is frequently manifested for work of this kind.

The new plan to be tried in Brighton, if properly carried out, should prove a great blessing. Germany has carried on this system in great perfection for some time, notably at Karlsruhe, where a splendid training school for domestic servants has been established by the Baden Women's Union. Several ladies of limited means are provided with two unfurnished rooms, coal, light, board and attendance for £54 and upwards, according to the size and position of the rooms occupied. The principal meals are taken in a common dining-room, unless it is specially desired to take them in private, which can be done by paying extra. The whole service is performed by girls between the ages of 15 and 19, who possess the necessary qualifications of good character, a satisfactory education, etc. The sum charged them is £17 10s., although in cases where this cannot be paid in full they are given some assistance.

They learn how to wash, make their clothes and mend (and this German women do most beautifully), to lay the table, care for glass and silver, to wait at meals and to do their duties punctually and methodically. In the afternoon theoretical teaching is given them in a simple but thoroughly interesting manner, and they are expected to respond to this teaching by being able to state what they have been taught in clear grammatical language.

There is no strained effort about the tuition. It is kept well in mind that it is given with a view to fitting them for all-round practical service and usefulness and no attempt is made to teach them what is superfluous and unnecessary to a sound, workable and intelligent understanding of the duties to be performed. The borders take a great interest in the domestic students and are often able to get them work. The head of the establishment being a thoroughly practical and motherly woman, a pleasant home atmosphere pervades the place which is an embodiment of law and order.

GOLD DISCOVERY IN NEW DISTRICT CAUSES BIG RUSH

(Special to The Monitor.)

VANCOUVER, B. C.—What has been described as one of the most remarkable discoveries of free gold ore on record is reported from Stewart, in the Portland canal district, and has caused a stampede among the prospectors at that place and at Prince Rupert.

It is said to have been traced for 20 miles, and is believed to be the source from which the streams in that vicinity have obtained their gold. Although large numbers are already striking out for the find there will be room enough for all, as the ore body, or "gold reef," as it has been described, is said to extend along the south fork of Bitter creek as far as the eye can reach.

LARGER ACREAGE IS TO BE AVAILABLE TO BRITISH SETTLERS

(Special to The Monitor.)

MELBOURNE, Victoria — So great a success is anticipated from the results of the visit of the Hon. Hugh Mackenzie and Elwood Mead to Great Britain that the acting water commissioner is, it is understood, increasing the amount of land to be made available for British settlers by 238,000 acres.

According to the latest figures it appears that 12,500,000 bushels of wheat have been exported, the greater part of the grain having been shipped to London. A supply of 8,000,000 bushels is still available.

The figures issued by the government statistician show that the wool clip for 1909-10 was 76,679,609, as compared with 68,930,200 pounds in the previous season. The total clip is stated to be larger by more than 10 per cent than that of 1908-09 and the average weight of the fleece for last season was nearly 13 per cent heavier than for the previous year.

There were 2,097,162 acres of land sown with wheat, or 317,257 acres more than in the previous season. The yield amounted to 28,780,000 bushels, the largest ever garnered in the state. The average of 13.72 bushels per acre was also the highest with the exception of 1904.

In referring to the matter at a meeting of the Colonial Bank the chairman said that the surplus available for export last year was 15,100,000 bushels, while the amount available this year was 20,530,000 bushels, valued at over $20,000,000. With regard to the dairying industry he pointed out that this was also in a prosperous condition, 13,715,000 tons of butter having been exported during the nine months ending March 31.

The value was estimated at $6,555,000 as against 7348 tons of butter valued at $3,735,000 exported during the corresponding period of last year.

GLIDDEN TOURISTS WILL COVER LONG DISTANCE TODAY

Left Oklahoma City This Morning and Will Put Up for the Night at Wichita, Kan.

ELEVEN CARS LEFT

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—The 11 cars which are still competing in the annual automobile endurance run of the A. A. A. for the Glidden and Chicago trophies left here this morning for Wichita, Kan., where they will put up for the night. The distance to be covered is 216 miles and a lively time is expected by the contestants.

The Chalmers No. 5 is still free from penalties, its nearest competitor being Premier No. 1, which has lost only 10 points.

On account of the performance of the Chalmers No. 5 the technical committee has announced that its members will take turns riding in the car as observers. The driver of the only unpenalized car says that his machine is running as smoothly as the day it left Cincinnati.

It had been expected that the run from Lawton to Oklahoma City would be a hard one on account of heavy sand for considerable distances along the banks of the Canadian river, but motor enthusiasts along the route covered the sand with straw and the tourists found the going very good.

As a result of this assistance and a couple of detours devised by Scout Lewis the day's run of 145 miles was hard on neither men nor cars, and but five cars went into this control with penalties registered against them.

Premier 2 lost a total of 156 points, Glide 10 lost 52, Cino 15 lost 57 and Moline 100 lost four. Driver Gardham did not finish repairing a fender iron on Chalmers 3 in time to have his loss reported.

The Falcar, which was left on the road between Texarkana and Dallas with a broken axle, will continue as a contesting car.

BEALS WRIGHT WINS ANOTHER

WIMBLEDON, England — The most important match in the fourth round for the championship singles Thursday was between Beals Wright and Roberts. The American player won, with 6—1, 6—2, 6—2. R. B. Powell beat G. A. Thomas, 6—4, 9—7, 4—6, 6—4. In the championship doubles Franklin and Evans defeated Bostwick and Holmes, 6—4, 6—4, 3—6, 6—1.

The Australian pair, Stanley N. Doust and L. O. Poidevin, showed first class form by winning over Evans and Hardy in the third round, the score being 6—0, 6—3, 6—2.

In the all England plate, which is a sort of consolation contest, Prof. G. H. Nettleton of Yale University won over Adams in the first round, 6—1, 6—2.

QUINCY OPENING POSTPONED.

The opening of the clubhouse of the Quincy Yacht Club has been postponed from June 30 to July 7. The change was made on account of Gov. Eben S. Draper having arranged to give a reception to the Argentine Republic officers now on duty at the Fore River Shipbuilding Company's works, and wives, and they had accepted invitations to attend the opening before Governor Draper's invitation was received.

Last Day Before the Regatta Is Being Devoted to Racing Starts and Short Paddles.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The crews which are here for the annual regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association tomorrow are having a very light day. The coaches have given their oarsmen the last hard work of the year and what little is done this afternoon and evening will be confined to racing starts and short, easy paddles.

Thursday was a fairly easy day. Pennsylvania and Wisconsin did not row at all in the morning, while the other three squads had the most perfunctory sort of work. In the afternoon a breeze from the south brought out all the crews for a little while, most of them getting some fast work over short stretches.

Courtney gave the Cornell varsity and freshman crews a stiff two-mile workout in which the varsity got away a little better than the youngsters and pulled out slightly in the lead at the end of the brush. The varsity rowed smoothly and with plenty of power.

The Columbia crews had only a little paddle in the morning, but in the afternon Rice gave the varsity eight a two-mile row at top speed, with the freshmen hanging on all the way.

Ellis Ward did not let the Pennsylvania crew row in the morning, but all three crews got on the water in the afternoon. They rowed up to the head of the course and came down at an easy stroke. The Quakers continued to show their wonderful form, which has become the one topic of discussion among rowing men here.

With the arrival of the advance guard of the crowds for the regatta Cornell is a great favorite to sweep the river, while the varsity eight is a decided favorite against the field. Columbia is the second choice in the varsity race.

RATIONAL Ggolf

BY JASON ROGERS.

In the present-day demand for the class of hole which usually necessitates the approach shot being played with a wooden club or a powerful iron club, one rather sighs for a few more of the old stamp of hole, says Harold H. Hilton in Vanity Fair. On one of the latest creations in courses I played upon last autumn there was not a single good drive-and-pitch hole on the course; in truth, the choice was somewhat limited, as there were only two holes in the whole 18 which to the average long driver could be classed as drive-and-pitch holes, and even these were almost more than this when played against a fair breeze. The impression the course left in my mind was that it was a good, but nevertheless monotonous, test of the game, as, unless I made a mistake, I never had a real pitch shot to play the whole of the way round, and mistakes will disorganize the length of the holes on any course.

One gets tired of playing holes of the same character day after day and week after week—it savors of full monotony—and courses as laid out in the present era of golf are truly very similar as regards the length of the holes.

It must be acknowledged that when one does come across holes of the true drive-and-pitch variety it is invariably a poor stamp of that class of hole, no doubt for the reason that those responsible for the laying out of the links have got the fact imbued into their minds that a hole of this class is not a good stamp of hole. Thus the drive-and-pitch hole owes its very existence to the fact that it is merely a connecting link in structure of the course in the sense that it has been created so as to allow other holes to be made a good length, a species of evil necessary on account of the limitations of the ground at command.

On many courses one will find holes of such a character stowed away in the middle of the course, and the invariable reason for their presence and existence is that the man who laid out the course found it necessary to arrive at a certain spot on the ground at command, and could not arrive there without dovetailing in a bad-length, characterless hole. It will generally be found that this connecting link is a hole of the drive and short-iron shot variety, and, in consequence, good holes of this class are difficult on any first-class links.

The truth is that the drive-and-pitch hole is never given even half a chance by the links' architect, as when prospecting ground he never even looks for a situation which would supply a testing drive and short-iron approach distance. If he finds a tract of ground which appeals to him as a spot where he can place a putting green which is difficult to approach, he promptly marks it off as an ideal spot for a short hole, as he must have good short holes. Then he looks out for his idea of ground suitable to the making of long two-shot holes, and, finally, for the long stretches of ground suitable to three-shot holes. Perhaps he may find in these three categories his full complement of 18 holes, and as there should be at least two shortish two-shot holes he will create them by shortening some of his long two-shot holes, and you may be sure he will pick the worst of these upon which to experiment. There is no wonder that one seldom comes across a good sample of the much-maligned drive-and-pitch hole, as they are invariably the creation of expediency or accident.

HARVARD DEFEATS YALE IN SECOND OF BASEBALL SERIES

Scores All of Her Three Runs in First Two Innings, Yale Scoring Two in the Seventh.

TO PLAY TUESDAY

Harvard defeated Yale on Soldiers field Thursday afternoon in the second game of their annual baseball series by a score of 3 to 2, making the series one game each and necessitating the playing of the third contest in New York city Tuesday next. One of the largest and most enthusiastic class day throngs that has ever witnessed one of these games was present and cheered their respective favorites.

Harvard took the lead in the first inning when she scored a run on a base on balls to McLaughlin, who was sacrificed to second by Marshal, coming home on Lanigan's single, the latter taking second on the throw in.

Two more runs were added to the Harvard side in the second inning. Gardner received a base on balls, went to second on Minot's infield hit, the latter reaching first on fielder's choice. Gardner then stole third. Young sacrificed Minot to second. Murfey then passed Carr, and Gardner and Minot scored on McLaughlin's hard single.

Tomers was substituted for Murfey in the third and while Harvard had a number of chances to score, she failed to get a man across the home plate.

Yale secured her two runs in the seventh without a safe hit. McLaughlin dropped Hicks' throw and McIntyre was safe on first. Hicks then passed Corey, both advancing a base on Stevens' sacrifice bunt. Merritt then hit to Marshall, who ran Corey down to third, forcing McIntyre home, which he reached on an error by Young. Gardner then dropped Tomer's low fly and Corey scored. Hicks then struck out Badger and McLaughlin caught Logan's foul fly. The summary:

ST. ANDREWS GOLF RECORD BY SMITH

Mexico City Man Cuts Two Strokes From Former Best Card in International Open Championship.

EDINBURGH, Scotland—The open golf championship play was resumed Thursday morning at St. Andrews. The early incident was the equaling of Duncan's record Thursday for the 6489-yard course of 73 by James Braid, title-holder of 1901, 1905, 1906 and 1908. Later there was the utmost enthusiasm over the card of Will Smith, who cut the record two strokes with a 71. He is the American open champion of 1899 and is entered from Mexico City, where for three years he has been the professional. The record score made Smith the leader after 36 holes with 148.

The elimination play ended Thursday and under the new conditions the scores count for the championship. The 60 with the lowest scores and those to tie for the sixtieth place will play the final 36 holes tomorrow in two rounds each of 18 holes. The leading scores:

Will Smith, 77, 71, 148; James Braid, 77, 73, 150; Duncan, 73, 77, 150; E. P. Gaudin, 77, 75, 152; Aleck Herd, 78, 74, 152; Harry Vardon, 77, 81, 158.

STURTEVANT TO LEAD COLBY.

WATERVILLE, Mass. — Lewis C. Sturtevant has been elected captain of the Colby baseball team for 1911. The choice of Sturtevant is a popular one for the new captain is one of the finest players on the team. He comes from the Maine Central Institute in Pittsfield and entered Colby in the class of '12. In his four years at the Pittsfield school he played baseball and has been a member of the Colby team for the two years he has been in college. He is a good catcher and will undoubtedly be behind the bat next season. This year he has played in left field, but has caught in some of the games.

HARVARD GIVEN RACING STARTS

Coach Wray Takes Place of Metcalf in Varsity and Then Coaches From His Single.

HARVARD CREW QUARTERS, Red Top, Conn.—Thursday's baseball victory over Yale and the cool weather today after the torrid heat of the past week put new life in the crimson oarsmen and a spirited forenoon's practise was the result.

When the varsity left the float Coach Wray was in at 3, to get "the feel of the shell," as he said. Metcalf soon resumed the seat, while Wray, in a single scull, drilled the men to overcome the weak spots he had discovered in his short ride with them.

Believing that the crews only need some finishing touches for the races on June 30, Coach Wray continued drilling them on racing starts. The varsity eight and freshman eight showed up strong.

Wray gave his various Harvard crews light work Thursday on account of the weather conditions. The first practise of the day for the varsity and freshman eights consisted of racing starts. From his single shell Coach Wray carefully illustrated the correct method of starting before each crew attempted to sprint off the mark. On the first trial each boat tended to kick back on the first stroke because the men used their leg drive too quick. This fault was remedied by a steady application of the shoulder swing, followed by a vigorous leg drive.

The varsity eight was towed down to the navy yard and paddled up to the quarters in the afternoon. At the mile mark it met the freshmen, who rowed alongside. The varsity rowed 29 strokes to the minute, and the freshmen 30 to 31, but neither crew changed its relative position.

The Yale squads paid their usual visit to the Harvard quarters in the afternoon. Last year Harvard called upon Yale at Gales Ferry. The progress of the baseball game at Cambridge was announced at the telegraph station, and in the evening the Harvard freshmen celebrated the crimson victory with a huge bonfire and a display of fireworks.

LIGHT WORK FOR YALE OARSMEN

No Practise for Any of the Crews in the Morning—Freshman Stroke is Out of Eight.

YALE CREW QUARTERS, Gales Ferry, Conn.—The blue crews held no practise this forenoon. Coach Kennedy chose to let the men lay off, to avoid all chances of overwork. The men lounged around quarters and seemed to enjoy the rest. Some of the athletes sought recreation in New London.

The weather is ideal for racing and all hands looked forward to a hard workout in the afternoon.

The Yale men were not allowed to do any hard work Thursday on account of the sultry conditions which prevailed.

The freshman eight has suffered another upset, through the loss of J. A. Appleton, stroke. He was out of the boat Thursday and it is very doubtful if he is again able to take his seat.

W. F. Howe of Brookline, who rowed No. 2 in the freshman boat, is substituting as stroke, and N. H. Read of Boston, No. 2 in the four, has been advanced to the same position in the eight.

In the evening Coach Kennedy had the two eights row down to the two-mile flag and back to quarters in easy stretches.

About 4:30 Captain Wodell and Coach Kennedy went down to Red Top to confer with Captain Waid, Coxswain King and F. Valentine Chappell, chairman of the Harvard-Yale regatta committee, in relation to changes on the upper end of the course. The conference resulted in minor changes in the position of the starting stake and also the 1½-mile mark, the main object being to avoid eddies at these points. W. A. Meiklejohn of Columbia has been chosen to referee the races.

MANY ENTRIES FOR CORINTHIAN YACHT CLUB OCEAN RACE

Contestants Leave Marblehead for Cape Elizabeth, Me., Tomorrow Afternoon at Two-Fifteen.

VALUABLE PRIZES

MARBLEHEAD—The most important yachting event of the early season will take place tomorrow afternoon under the auspices of the Corinthian Yacht Club, when the 145-mile ocean race to Cape Elizabeth lightship and return will be started off Marblehead light at 2:15 p. m. The race will be open to yachts of any recognized club, and there will be absolutely no restrictions as to sails and crew. The course will be direct from the starting line to the lightship and return, the only requirement being that Thacher's island and the Salvages shall be left to port on the first leg, and to starboard on the homeward run.

Four classes will be sent over the line, including, for the first time in years, a class for schooners, at their regular ratings. Ex-Commodore Henry A. Morss, winner of two Bermuda races, will be a prominent contender for the trophy offered by the club, entering his newly-purchased schooner, the Vision. The Shiyessa, now owned by Demarest Lloyd, the Shiyessa IV., Alfred Douglass' fast schooner, and the famous Emerald, owned by F. Lewis Clark, are other likely entries in this class.

All the class P boats will probably be out at the starting gun, and there should be a great race for the silver trophy presented by ex-Commodore Morss, with the Amoret, Onda II., Mavourneen, Timandra and Wianno fighting for the honors. The P boats will race without handicaps.

Class A, for sloops and yawls over 30 feet waterline length, will bring out the old rivals, the Dorello and the Odysseus, and C. K. Cumming's new 38-rater Alice. Class B, for boats between 21 and 30 feet waterline, should bring to the start the largest class of the day, with the old ocean-racer Nutmeg, sailed by A. C. Jones, the favorite over the Marie L., Virginia and Pontiac. The handicaps for these two classes will be adjusted by the regatta committee and posted at the C. Y. C. clubhouse the evening before the race.

OLDFIELD CLIPS TRACK RECORD

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Barney Oldfield, in a 200-horsepower Benz, broke the world's circular track record for one mile, Thursday, driving the distance in 49 2-5 seconds, 2-5 of a second better than his time Wednesday. The previous record was 50 4-5 seconds, held by Ralph DePalma.

Ray Harroun, in a Marmon, won the five-mile free-for-all handicap race, with Oldfield, in a Knox, second. Time, 4h. 50m. 1-5s. A 10-mile match between M. McLane, in a Buick stock car, and Ray Harroun, in a Marmon, was won by the latter. Time, 11h. 2m. 2-5s.

Glenn H. Curtiss made a 15-minute exhibition flight in his aeroplane. J. C. Mars, in attempting a flight in a Curtiss machine, ran into a fence and the machine was damaged.

Harvard Stadium Thronged on Class Day

CLUB HOST AT HARVARD

Pi Eta members of senior class entertain college guests.

PI ETA CLUBHOUSE AT HARVARD.
Imposing building on Boylston street, Cambridge, near Harvard square, and scene of elaborate spread today.

Most of the large spreads are reserved until after the Stadium exercises.

The undergraduates and graduates formed by classes in the old yard about 3:30 p. m. prior to marching to the Stadium exercises. The seniors at the same time gathered by themselves back of Hollis hall and enjoyed their "tree exercises," which were of a humorous nature and restricted to members of the class only.

At 4:30 o'clock come the picturesque Stadium exercises and the historic ivy oration, which will be delivered this year by Frank W. Sullivan of Lowell.

More spreads are in order after the Stadium exercises, followed by dancing at the Union, Memorial hall, the Hemenway gymnasium and smaller halls in the vicinity of the yard.

Some of the large spreads which follow the Stadium exercise are the Beck hall spread, which will be served on the green at the rear of the hall, the Wadsworth house spread, the Delta Upsilon spread in the quadrangle formed by Massachusetts, Dane and Mathews halls, and the Kappa Gamma Chi spread in upper Massachusetts hall.

Gamma chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity gives its annual class day spread at the fraternity house on Prescott street.

Theta Beta Chi will entertain its friends at the clubhouse on Dunster street, the Triangle Club in the quadrangle back of Harvard hall, Phi Beta Kappa Society in the quadrangle between Sever hall and Quincy street, the Harvard Lampoon in its new home on Mt. Auburn street and the Harvard Union on its own grounds. In addition there will be scores of spreads in the rooms of members of the senior class.

The illumination of the yard by thousands of Japanese lanterns and the two illuminated fountains will be spectacular sights of the evening.

The final event on the program is the glee club concert at 9 o'clock. The club will assemble on the steps of Sever hall and sing college and other popular songs until late in the evening.

College Value to People Discussed by the Orator

William Richard Ohler of Bethel, Conn., class orator, speaking on "Harvard and the Community," said, in part:

"The age in which we at present are living makes great demands upon the services of educated men. Ours is a time of industrial expansion and of industrial struggle. We must consider the development of the whole community.

"One of the great issues of our day is the demand which the common people are making for a share in the government and in the wealth and also in the educational privileges of the nation. More and more are educational institutions coming to realize their obligations in this respect. A strong feature of Harvard's policy during the last decade has been the sincere attempt to extend the usefulness of the college. The Lowell Institute courses, the summer school and Radcliffe College are examples of this policy of extension.

"The future of Harvard, like the future of every educational institution, must in the long run be determined by the usefulness of the institution to the state or community. The narrow margin by which the college taxation bill was defeated last fall, and the critical financial condition in which Harvard would be placed were such a bill to become a law, are considerations which cause us to realize the seriousness of the problem. Harvard's only defense against such a misfortune is her sincerity in serving the state.

"No thoughtful Harvard graduate who has any interest whatsoever in public questions of the day can be blind to the need of the country for strong men to direct her political affairs. Not only are capable men needed in office but also they are needed in the various branches of political research. Such problems as taxation and municipal accounting represent fields of political activity which are far from being overcrowded.

"As Harvard men we are called upon to strengthen the name of Harvard throughout the country. In this laudable ambition may we never forget that the finest service we can render our alma mater is through service to the community. Fortunately Harvard has not lacked in men who possess this high degree of loyalty. Of the many such men who could be named no man has served Harvard better in this respect than ex-President Eliot. Never can it be said of him that he placed Harvard before the community. Always his first service was to the public, and who can say that Harvard's position in the nation has not grown under his guidance. Equally fortunate are we to have in President Lowell a man who in like measure has caught the vision of Harvard's place in the nation. Himself a man of affairs, President Lowell is bent upon uniting Harvard, in every way possible, with the life of the country.

"The country judges Harvard through her sons. Harvard needs our gifts, but she needs greater our influence as public servants. Once Harvard has become a national institution, once her life has become ingrafted in the life of the nation, she need never want in financial support. May we always remember that the life which will cause our alma mater the greatest pleasure and pride is the life lived in the service of the community."

The Ode and the Poem Were Both Well Received

The class ode, sung to the tune of "Fair Harvard," and written by Thomas Stearns Eliot of St. Louis, Mo., was as follows:

For the hour that is left us Fair Harvard, with thee,
Ere we face the importunate years,
In thy shadow we wait, while thy presence dispels
Our vain hesitations and fears.
And we turn as thy sons ever turn, in the strength
Of the hopes that thy blessings bestow,
From the hopes and ambitions that sprang at thy feet
To the thoughts of the past as we go.

Yet for all of these years that tomorrow has lost
We are still the less able to grieve,
With so much that of Harvard we carry away
In the place of the life that we leave.
And only the years that efface and destroy
Give us also the vision to see
What we owe for the future, the present, and past,
Fair Harvard, to thine and to thee.

Officers for Class Day Have Been Prominent Men

Brief sketches of the class day officers who take prominent parts today follow:

Robert Clois Brown of Medford, first marshal, prepared for college at Andover, where he was prominent in athletics. He played on the freshman football and baseball teams at Harvard, and the past fall was substitute end on the varsity eleven. This spring he was substitute catcher on the varsity baseball team, winning his "H" in the first Princeton game.

Charles Leo Lanigan of Lawrence, second marshal, is another Andover graduate. He captained the Harvard 1910 freshman baseball at college and is captain of this year's Harvard varsity nine. He was a member of 1910 freshman hockey team and one of last year's varsity golf team.

Jesse Edwin Waid of St. Louis, third marshal and captain of the varsity eight, prepared for Harvard at the East Side high school, Denver. He rowed in the 1910 freshman eight and has been a member of the varsity crew for three years.

Clarence Cook Little of Brookline, class secretary, prepared at Noble & Greenough's school, Boston. He won the intercollegiate championship in the shotput in 1909 and was captain of this year's varsity track team. He has high academic honors, being a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society.

Philip Wyman of Fitchburg, class treasurer, was graduated at the Fitchburg high school. He was vice-president of the Harvard 1910 class in his junior year, president of Phillips Brooks Association and manager of the varsity baseball team this spring. He was one of the editorial board of the Harvard Lampoon for three years.

William Richard Ohler of Bethel, Conn., class orator, prepared for college at Mt. Hermon school. He has played on his class baseball team since his freshman year. During the past winter he was secretary of the Phillips Brooks Association.

Twining Lynes of Cambridge, class chorister, prepared at the Ringe Manual Training School, Cambridge. He was active in musical and literary circles throughout his college course.

Frank William Sullivan of Lowell, ivy orator, is a graduate of the Lowell high school. At college he has been prominent in undergraduate debating. He was a member of the Speakers Club for two years.

Thomas Stearns Eliot of St. Louis, class odist, was prominent in literary circles at Harvard. He is a member of the editorial board of the Harvard Advocate.

Edward Eyre Hunt of Mechanicsburg, O., class poet, has won honors in English throughout his college course. He is a member of several literary clubs and a contributor to the Harvard publications.

Three Roanoke Cyclists Attend Class Day Fetes

Three Daleville College juniors from Roanoke, Va., are attending the Harvard class day exercises today at Cambridge, having arrived here on their 2000-mile bicycle trip, which started from Roanoke June 4. They are W. K. Ikesberry, D. W. Peters and A. C. Flora.

The juniors have made 700 miles of their trip, stopping at Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and New Haven, and plan to make the other miles by way of Pittsfield and Albany through to Roanoke. They are riding for pleasure and are not trying to make time records.

In the frames of their wheels each carries a knapsack, which contains a sweater and various small fixtures for their wheels in case mishap should befall them. A trunk with their clothes is shipped ahead of the wheelmen to the larger cities where they stop over night.

Mr. Flora, speaking for the party, said that the roads were in good condition and that barring a few places where the mud was heavy they could not be better.

Ivy Orator Pays Tribute to Mr. Lowell and Mr. Eliot

The ivy oration, which is to be delivered by Frank W. Sullivan of Lowell in the Stadium at 4:30 o'clock, contains the following:

"Fellows, 1910 has had many opportunities for happiness. But undoubtedly the most fondly cherished of all these memories—and here kindly credit me with one moment's seriousness—the most fondly cherished of all these memories is that we have enjoyed a privilege not accorded a senior class for nearly a full half century, that of attending the inauguration of a president of this university. We regretted the departure of the able and beloved Dr. Eliot from that office; we rejoice at his continued activity in the public welfare. We congratulate ourselves and the classes to follow on the election of that man in wisdom, that boy in spirit, President Lowell. Fellows, I know you join me when I wish long life to the departed, and long life to the present incumbent."

Finishing touches were put to the "Harvard I," the aeroplane of the Harvard Aeronautical Society, this morning preparatory to the exhibition flights which will be made on Soldiers field this afternoon previous to the Stadium exercises. Director J. V. Martin will be in charge of the flights.

Poem Gives College Life Picture and Sounds Call

The class poem, by Edward Eyre Hunt of Mechanicsburg, O., began as follows:

Up from the valleys and over the hills
And on and on to the mountain height,
The highways beckon, and morning thrills
Youth with a new delight.

Out in the morning men go by,
Cheerily, wearily, swift or slow—
Into the morning you and I
Fling wide the gates and go.

Who would falter for doubts or fears?
Who would linger an hour today?
Into the light of the years—the years—
Up, and out, and away!...

Here followed an idyllic picture of college life, then a division exalting man's possibilities and powers, and finally the picture of man's life in the world, which was in large part as follows:

But through the moan of whistles comes
The sound of traffic's throb and roar,
A sound like dim and distant drums
Marshaling men to war.

I hear it mounting from the throngs
That crowd the highways of the earth:
Beneath their psalms are bitter songs;
Beneath their plenty, dearth.

The plangent cities reek and smoke,
And night is painted with a glare
That mocks the livid lightning stroke
And fills the heavy air

With portents of tremendous doom
As screaming locomotives leap
Down the black avenues of gloom,
Down to the fields of sleep.

Titantic forges blast the hills;
The plains are raucous marts of trade;
The valleys shriek with mighty mills;
And men are sore afraid,

And lift their pleading hands to One
To save them from the greed of men.—
By the dark streams of Babylon
Their cry goes up again.

By the dark waters of despair
Men, broken, bruised, and bleeding, lie;
By the dark waters of despair
They blaspheme life, and die.

For Babylon is built anew—
A city of masters and of slaves—
Giving Her treasures to the few,
And to the many, graves.

The dead She rifles in the tomb;
The dying in Her marts are sold;
Children are purchased in the womb:
And Christ cries as of old

To them that buy and sell at ease,
His warning: "Inasmuch as ye
Have done it to the least of these,
Ye did it unto Me."

The agony, and bloody sweat,
The cross, the passion, and the tomb—
Men see the Christ of Olivet
At mill and mart and loom.

But still they clutch their hoarded sums
And answer with the words of Cain:
"Am I my brother's keeper?" comes
The lying taunt again.

Peace—till the masters of the earth
Have read the writings on the wall:
Dumb shall be all their idle mirth
When the dread terrors fall.

Peace—let them come, if come they must:
The days of trembling and dull fear.
Our sons shall count them but as dust
That cumbers yesteryear.

Light crashes from the pits of change,
And blinding, burning splendor runs
Through all the gamuts of the strange
New universe, and stuns

The sense with mighty things destroyed,
As dark-consuming thoughts are hurled
Like shards of chaos through the void,
Forth to a waiting world.

What men have dared, shall we not dare?
What men have done, shall we not do?
What men must share, shall we not share?
Shall not our hearts be true?

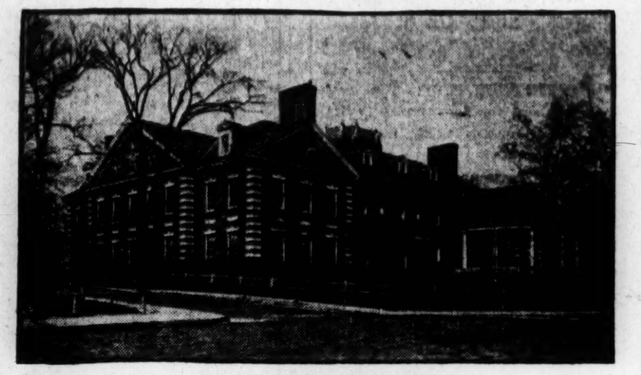

Tomorrow we are of the throngs
That crowd the highways of the earth,
And victory must shape our songs,
And love, and might, and mirth!

The songs of labor and desire,
Of far-off deeds and destinies!
Songs whose glad hope shall be as fire
To light all mysteries.

What men have dared, our souls must dare;
What men have done, our hands must do;
What men must share, our lives will share—
The terrible, the new.

First Commercial Flight Today

Giant dirigible Deutschland carries twenty passengers, each of whom pays fifty dollars for a three-hour trip.

COUNT ZEPPELIN'S FAMOUS TYPE OF AIRSHIP.
The Hamburg-American Steamship Company and the German Airship Company, which own the craft known as the Deutschland, place aerial transportation on a business basis by the voyage that is taken today.

DUSSELDORF, Ger.—The first aerial trip for purely commercial purposes in the history of aviation began here today when the Deutschland, giant dirigible owned by the Hamburg-American Steamship Company and the German Airship Stock Company, sailed for a three-hour trip, carrying 20 passengers who had paid $50 each for their tickets.

Within three hours she was back again, having completed 100 miles successfully at an average speed of 33 miles an hour. A stiff breeze was blowing on her return, necessitating her anchorage in the open instead of in the big enclosure which with the housing shed constitutes the "station." The previous trip of the Deutschland was exclusively for invited guests, but each passenger paid today. Dusseldorf will be used as the starting point and terminus for all of the Deutschland's short trips, or trips of 100 miles or less.

The Deutschland was scheduled to make another 100-mile trip this afternoon with another set of 20 passengers, exclusive of the crew.

On the voyage there were 12 German passengers, six Englishmen and two Hollanders. They enjoyed a buffet breakfast soon after the cruise began. There is a ticket office at every station and within a fortnight it is expected that airship travel will become almost as prosaic as railway travel.

PROMISES TO BE A BRITISHER IF MR. ROOSEVELT'S ELECTED

CINCINNATI — Eugene Zimmerman, railroad magnate and father of the Duchess of Manchester, announced Thursday that he intends to become a subject of King George of Great Britain if Theodore Roosevelt is elected President again.

"If Roosevelt is elected," he said, "I am going over to England, become a citizen and stay there.

"If Roosevelt is elected our next President this country will have taken the first step toward a dictatorship and when that happens I will prefer a country that's a liberal constitutional monarchy. Roosevelt today is our big national menace.

"I am a good American citizen," continued Mr. Zimmerman, "and I hope the election of Roosevelt will not come to pass. Things are bad enough now. In fact, times are worse than they were. There is too much legislation in Washington.

"I am for Governor Harmon for our next President, and I believe if he runs he will be elected."

Mr. Zimmerman, who formerly made his home in Cincinnati, now registers at hotels as from Detroit, where his business offices are. He said that he was going to visit his daughter at Kylemoor castle in Ireland next fall.

COTTON LEADERS ENTER GUILT PLEA

WASHINGTON—The famous "cotton leak" cases came practically to a close today when pleas of guilty were entered by Moses Haas of New York city and Frederick Peckham of Cincinnati. Haas was fined $6000 and Peckham $5000 by Justice Gould in the district criminal court.

They admitted that they were technically guilty of having conspired to cause misconduct in office on the part of Edwin S. Holmes, Jr., who, in 1905, was assistant statistician in the interior department in charge of the cotton reports. An indictment still stands against Holmes.

FORMER PRESIDENT'S TENNIS PARTNERS IN GAME AT OYSTER BAY

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.—Play on the new court laid out at Sagamore hill engaged the attention of Mr. Roosevelt and his house guests, former Secretary of the Interior J. R. Garfield and former Chief Forester Pinchot today, both members of the "tennis cabinet." It was the first time that the former President has engaged in the game since he left the White House.

The subject of their talk was known only to the trio as Mr. Roosevelt declined to receive interviewers.

The noon train brought Francis J. Heney, famed for his prosecution of the grafters at San Francisco, who had been invited for luncheon.

"I don't know that I shall ever make another political speech," said Theodore Roosevelt to a group of interviewers Thursday.

"I have no idea when I shall make a political speech," he said. "I shall make no speech of any kind for two months, and my first speeches in Kansas City, Cheyenne, Milwaukee and Chicago will have nothing to do with politics. I don't know that I shall ever make another political speech."

"What, never?" some one exclaimed.

"I don't say 'never,'" he corrected; "I simply don't know."

On Saturday, Henry L. Stimson, special prosecutor in the sugar fraud trials, will run down for luncheon, and late in the week, probably on Saturday, W. R. Nelson of Kansas City is expected. Nobody knows when to expect Governor Hughes. On Tuesday he will leave for Cambridge, Mass., to attend the Harvard commencement. He expects to be back in New York on Friday, but he may take in the Yale-Harvard boat race at New London, Conn.

Lloyd C. Griscom, chairman of the New York Republican county committee, has been invited to spend a day with Mr. Roosevelt and will go to Oyster Bay next week.

MR. BALLINGER'S EXIT IS RUMORED

NEW YORK—The American today prints the following Washington despatch:

The first break in President Taft's cabinet is expected now any day. It comes from the most authentic circles that Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, has decided to surrender his cabinet portfolio. The charges made by Gifford Pinchot have brought a notoriety that has been most distasteful not only to the secretary but to his family. The resignation is awaiting an opportune time for the President's acceptance of it.

The equipment comes with receiving and sending apparatus, storage and field batteries and necessary masts and wires, and will be carried in a field wagon. It will transmit messages from 25 to 30 miles and with practise can be unpacked and set up in working order in 08 seconds.

COLONIAL BEDSTEADS

The popularity of the Colonial bed is steadily growing.

But it should be remembered that the most characteristically beautiful pieces are very hard to find. They were sufficiently rare even in Colonial times.

Once found they are no more expensive in reproduction than the commonplace designs.

The pineapple poster model is illustrated above. It is distinguished by solid but exquisitely graceful proportions. These beds are made in our own shops in the finest manner. We are making a special price both on the twin bed and double size of $45 each.

Commencement Days at the Colleges

COMMANDER PEARY SIGNALLY HONORED BY HIS ALMA MATER

Bowdoin College Commencement Feature Is Reception to Pole Discoverer by His Fellow Alumni.

OVATION ACCORDED

BRUNSWICK, Me.—"Robert Edwin Peary—resolute and resourceful explorer, truthful narrator; who has accepted nature's haughtiest challenge and by science and skill, courage and endurance, forethought and perseverance, proved man the master of the world he stands on, from the tropics to the poles."

This acknowledgment of the successful career of Commander Peary, who graduated in 1877, and was the lion of the hour at the one hundred and fifth commencement exercises of Bowdoin College Thursday, was made by President Hyde when he conferred upon the explorer the degree of LL. D.

Mr. Peary was met at the station, where he arrived at 1:20 p. m. from New York, by Gen. Joshua L. Chamberlain, who was president of Bowdoin when Mr. Peary was a student, and by a delegation of his classmates of the class of 1877, consisting of Librarian George T. Little and Col. George L. Thompson of Brunswick, and John E. Chapman of Boston, the class secretary.

They escorted him to Memorial hall, where the commencement dinner was held, and President Hyde had just concluded his address.

As the party appeared those present received them with a big ovation, which included generous rounds of cheers and applause for five minutes.

Other honorary degrees were:

CORNELL UNIVERSITY.

ITHACA, N. Y.—Thousands of senior week guests watched the Cornell seniors march to the armory to receive their diplomas Thursday from President Schurman.

The address by President Schurman was devoted mainly to the late Goldwin Smith, the bulk of whose large fortune goes to Cornell.

"The foundation of Goldwin Smith's political philosophy," said Dr. Schurman, "was the maxim he caused to be carved on the stone seat which he placed on the campus of Cornell University, 'Above All Nations Is Humanity.' An Englishman by birth, he was proud of the historic ideals and traditions and loyal to the genuine interests of England; but he sternly refused to identify those interests and ideals with territorial acquisitions, with selfish aggrandizement.

"Mighty forces operating upon the two kindred American nations can scarcely fail to mold them to a common international destiny. And thus, in substance if not in form, Goldwin Smith's dream of continental union may be actually fulfilled. With it may also come—is it not already rapidly approaching?—the moral union of all the English-speaking nations and their alliance, for the purpose of maintaining the peace of the world and the settlement of international disputes by the arbitration of The Hague."

MONITOR IS CALLED A MODEL THAT FEW BELIEVED POSSIBLE

The Duluth (Minn.) Tribune Points to Christian Science Paper as Argument for an Undenominational Organ.

CLEAN NEWS SUPPLY

There is a field of much usefulness which the laymen, engaged in the great mission movement, should occupy. It is now vacant, yet it offers an agency greater than any other for effecting a unity of effort in the work undertaken, and in upholding and fostering that work, says the Duluth (Minn.) Tribune.

This field is that of the religious press, which is now skirted about by a multitude of sectarian and denominational journals, but occupied by none. There are many church publications, but no great religious journal with a common appeal to all churches, all Christians and all who recognize the tremendous potential power of the churches, if they could but be brought in harmony of action.

The Christian Scientists have established a daily newspaper, The Monitor, which in a single year reached a circulation that placed it among the great daily papers of this country. Moreover, it serves as a model; indeed, it is that model for which so many critics of the press have expressed a desire, and which so few believed to be a practical possibility.

It is such a possibility only because of its origin and its ready-made clientele, yet it gets support from thousands who have no connection with, and little tolerance of, Christian Science, because it is not used as an organ, nor to exploit, further than by inference, that denomination.

But it illustrates what the laymen representing, as they do in their all-embracing organization, all denominations of the so-called evangelical churches of the Protestant faith, could do for Christianity in this field. Such an organ, with its ready-made clientele far greater than that of The Monitor, would be wholly free to apply the rule of Christian righteousness to all subjects and to all measures.

It could advocate all that is good and censure all that is evil. It could publish to the world the good that men do in their lives and repress the evil. It would be another model to show the possibilities of the daily press when wholly free from the demand for "all the news all the time."

The present denominational and religious press is wholly inadequate. It is feeble, sentimental and has not force of appeal to any but the orthodox, who do not need it. It has no effect upon public opinion in general, and rather antagonizes than wins support for what it advocates. But the influence of an undenominational Christian organ in the hands of broad-minded laymen should be able to do much to cementing the churches and win to their aid the general public.

LIST OF OLD WORLD'S UNIVERSITIES BEGINS AT QUAINT EL ASHAR

Mohammedan Center of Learning Founded by Saladin 988 Makes Harvard's 1638 Look Very Young.

ROLL OF ANCIENTS

"When we think of Harvard or Yale, the former dating from 1638 and the latter from 1701, we think of them as old universities," says a writer in the American Educational Review; "but when we pass to the other side of the world we discover that even the oldest American universities are in reality very young institutions.

"The oldest educational institution in the world is the University of El Ashar, Cairo, founded in the year 988 by the great Saladin. It is the central seat of learning for the whole Mohammedan world. It occupies an ancient mosque in the Arab quarter of Cairo, surrounded by a confusing maze of narrow streets.

"The old mosque covers several acres and consists of a series of courts surrounded by long cloisters with low roofs supported by forests of columns. The floors of red tiles are covered daily by a multitude of men and boys, squatting in semicircles around their teachers, who sit with their backs to the columns lecturing in monotones.

"The chancellor of the university is always a descendant of the prophet and is usually a man of ability and learning. He occupies apartments in El Ashar and is not only the supreme educational but the ecclesiastical head of the church in Egypt.

"There is no organization similar to that in modern universities. Any reputable man who desires to teach can obtain the privilege by application and is assigned a column where he may sit and impart knowledge as he thinks proper. His fame or ability will attract more or less students and disciples, who pay him fees according to their means.

"The next oldest institution in the world is the University of Parma, Italy, which was founded in 1025.

"The oldest institution in territory belonging to the United States is the University of St. Thomas at Manila, which was founded in 1605. The oldest in America is the University of San Marcos at Lima, Peru, founded in 1551. The second oldest is the University of Cordoba, Argentine Republic, founded in 1713.

"The University of Berlin, which stands next to that of Paris in numbers, was not founded until 1809, but has a total of 13,881 students all told, with 9249 in actual attendance upon the lectures at the university buildings.

"The largest institution in South America is the National University of the Argentine Republic at Buenos Aires, with 2650 students. The largest institution in Canada is the University of Toronto, with 2547 students.

"The University of London, which has 767 instructors, has 6341 students and ranks among the great universities of modern times.

"The oldest universities, 37 in number, are here named, together with the year when founded and the number of students in attendance:

GAS IS PREDICTED FOR SAN ANTONIO

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Natural gas and all the economic advantages linked with it will in the very near future be within reach of this city. The great natural gas tract south of here is being proved day by day to be fully capable not only to supply San Antonio, but also every other southwest Texas city. One of the wells struck a few days ago sent up a column of water and oil 170 feet high, subsiding afterwards to a rush of gas, the roar of which could be heard five miles away. So far six wells have been sunk and pipe lines from them are now being laid to Laredo and down the Rio Grande, where the gas will be used as fuel in irrigation plants.

The intention of the company is to pipe its products as far south as Brownsville and Corpus Christi and as far north as San Antonio and possibly Austin

MAYOR GAYNOR SETS SIMPLE LIFE BEFORE NEW YORK STUDENTS

NEW YORK—Mayor Gaynor addressed the graduating class of the College of the City of New York Thursday, Great hall, decorated with the banners of the leading colleges of the world, being packed to the doors when the graduating class filed in, followed by President Finley and the members of the faculty, who sat on the paltform.

There were three senior addresses. Abraham Lusskin spoke on "The Citizen"; Jacob Hoffman, "Life versus Experience," and Samuel B. Applebaum, "Historical Perspective."

Mayor Gaynor said, in part:

"This college is almost entirely supported by the city of New York; in plain words, by the taxpayers and rentpayers. They, through this college, have given you this splendid education, equal to that to be obtained in any college or university in the land.

"Wherever your lot may be cast, whether you intend to stay here in this city, already crowded, or settle elsewhere, remember your great obligation to the community.

"For this reason enter legitimately into public affairs. I am not encouraging you to become politicians or office seekers, but it is the duty of all men, and doubly so of men like you, educated at the public expense, to give a certain amount of your time to the common weal.

As you go out into your communities assist in public affairs, at elections, and in selecting proper persons to hold office. You are intelligent beings, and to do your full duty you must rise higher than the ordinary level to where all prejudice is absolutely gone. Test everything by the knowledge you have acquired. Take nothing for granted. Follow nobody and shout for nobody until you have tested the ideas they represent and are satisfied that it is the proper thing for you to do.

"Do not say, 'I will not help that man to office because he is a Democrat or a Republican. That is degrading. A man may be a Democrat or even a Republican without having cloven feet. Even if you believe in the general national policies of one party that has nothing to do with municipal elections. Stand for high tariff or free trade as you please, but do not let that fact influence you when you are voting for mayor. If you do your education has been wasted. The vain man never reaches the highest point in the professions. It is the simple man who succeeds. Do not arrogate airs to yourself, because they easily slide off. Go out of here with no notion that you are learned men or that your education is complete. Anybody who thinks so had better stay on here. Keep on studying. To be a success you have got to work hard."

RHODE ISLAND SEES AEROPLANE TRIP AT NIGHT BY OPERATOR

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Joseph Seymour, in a private test at Narragansett park, Thursday evening, accomplished the first successful aeroplane flight ever made in Rhode Island.

The fact that it was dark by the time his biplane had been tuned up by the mechanics added interest to the test that the aviator had not counted upon. Nevertheless, rather than disappoint the party which had been invited to see him fly, Mr. Seymour gave an exhibition that went off without a hitch.

Although only a preliminary test for the big flight scheduled for Saturday, Rhode Island's first aviation was successful.

At just 8 o'clock, when the fast disappearing daylight made it look as if even a short soar aloft would be too risky to attempt, Mr. Seymour flew in a Curtiss biplane part way around the old race track and then back again to the starting point. He did not rise higher than 30 feet from the ground, because it was too dark for him to see clearly more than 10 feet ahead of his machine, but he skimmed through the air for fully a quarter of a mile at a rate of speed which made the 200 or so spectators hold their breath until he had alighted.

What Other Editors Are Saying

THE selected editorial comments today deal with the passage of the new railroad bill, and its probable effects on the general trade of the country:

CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD—What is vital and essential in the bill is the extension of the initiative and power of the commission in preventing arbitrary action on rates. There is, however, nothing in the bill which militates against the true and fundamental interests of the great transportation industry. Publicity, stable and fixed law, competent administration by the commission and the commerce court should increasingly tend to peace and prosperity.

NEW YORK WORLD—The chief effect of the bill is to strengthen and make more efficient the machinery employed in the federal regulation of rates. The burden of the proof that the new rates are fair and reasonable is imposed on the railroads, and pending any appeal to the new court of commerce or the United States supreme court all shippers must be fully protected against overcharging.

MEMPHIS (Tenn.) NEWS-SCIMITAR—The bill as passed will probably embody as much popular control as the people at the present time are equipped to exercise. Too much control until the government is freer of selfishness in public officials and selfishness in the people would have a tendency of leveling down rather than leveling up, yet the bill does make progress toward larger control by the government or the people."

PORTLAND (Ore.) OREGONIAN—As the new bill is by far the most comprehensive and far-reaching measure that has ever came before the people, the effects of its operation will be awaited with considerable interest. There is, and always will be, an interdependence and a kind of partnership, between the railroads and the shippers, and if the new bill has solved the vexatious problems which with demagogic assistance have at times drawn the interested parties into conflict, it will have accomplished much.

MONTREAL STAR—The much-modified Taft railroad bill has received the President's signature, and the railways will soon have an opportunity of pleading their case for higher freights before the interstate commerce commission. This brings the United States machinery for regulating railway rates nearer to the Canadian model. So far the machinery has worked well in Canada, and it will be interesting to see it tried on a larger scale.

BUFFALO COMMERCIAL—It is to be said, in fairness, that the new railroad act represents a very great advance in the development of the settled public policy of federal railroad regulation. When it is considered that all parties in Congress agree that the bill is fairly satisfactory, and that President Taft is glad to get it through at all, the general public may well be content with the situation.

CIVIC RESPONSIBILITY AND DUTY EXTOLLED BY JUDGE GROSSCUP

TOLEDO, O.—An address by Judge Peter S. Grosscup of Chicago closed the Ohio state convention of the Luther league Thursday evening. Judge Grosscup's subject was "The Young Lutheran as a Citizen." He said in part:

"Underneath the surface a new appreciation of civic responsibility is awakening, just as in the springtime, underneath the surface, a new life begins to stir. To be merely rich no longer allures as it did a few years ago. To the best of our young manhood and young womanhood civic duty and public position are coming back again to their old place, as opportunity to exercise usefully power possessed and power given—in city government and in the legislatures, as well as in Congress and on the bench.

"But this needs a constant renewal from within; a constant calling into action of that thing within us that is not wholly of the world—that sense of the personal responsibility, both for ourselves and for others, that is laid upon us from the upper world. And here it is that in practical affairs the power of religion makes itself felt.

"The soldier sent out with sealed orders opens them when the morning comes and then executes them, without question of whether what he is to do seems worth while or not. To the man who believes that this life is a part in some well-ordered plan—that it did not begin yesterday and will not end tomorrow—the duty that opens to him each morning and his opportunity to perform it, is the sealed order given him for that day. And, like the soldier, he executes it. That it is duty, plainly written before him, is all that he need see."

HON. HOKE SMITH TO BE CANDIDATE

AUGUSTA, Ga.—The Hon. Hoke Smith announced Thursday that he would enter the race against Gov. Joseph Brown, who has announced his candidacy for reelection. Upon hearing of former Governor Smith's intention, H. H. Perry, former state senator, abandoned the race and threw his support to Mr. Smith.

The race between the two will cause more than usual interest. Mr. Brown two years ago, upon being dismissed from the railroad commission by Governor Smith, opposed him for relection and won.

Governor Smith, although a beloved Georgian, has grown considerably in the affections of the people since the last campaign. He was a member of former President Cleveland's cabinet.

LOCAL AND TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

J. L. Richards, president of the New England Gas & Coke Company, tendered a complimentary dinner to George H. Finn, for 12 years general manager of the company, Thursday evening at the Algonquin Club.

A general layout of the work for the year was discussed at a joint meeting of the railroad commission, Boston transit and metropolitan park and harbor and land commissioners, Thursday afternoon. The board made an automobile tour of inspection of the proposed route for Neponset avenue.

DEERFIELD, Mass.—Old Deerfield is to have an open-air historical pageant Thursday evening, July 14, and Friday and Saturday afternoons, July 15 and 16. Colonial and Indian times will be recalled.

WESTFIELD, Mass.—On July 4 the fountain presented to Westfield by the National Humane Alliance will be dedicated in the morning with appropriate exercises.

The Middlesex county taxpayers' committee has discovered what is considered highly important new evidence in its investigation of the county's affairs, and this led to a request Thursday to Attorney-General Malone for a continuance of time before the case is presented. The extension of time was granted.

The Freight Handlers assembly committee of the Boston & Maine railroad expects to hold a conference with President Lucius Tuttle of that road some time next week to settle the question of an increase of 25 cents a day demanded by the men, who have refused to accept as final the advance of 14 cents a day granted by the road.

"I'm Elated!" Smiles Mr. Taft

Declares Congress a success, fulfilling the pledges of the party.

FAMOUS AMERICAN TRIUMVIRATE.
President Taft on the left, addresses Vice-President Sherman while Speaker of the House Cannon stands between the two.

CINCINNATI—In a signed statement in the Times Star, President Taft is quoted as follows:

"I am elated at the legislation which has been enacted by this Congress. It has fulfilled the pledges of the party. It is a great satisfaction to me that we have accomplished so much.

"It has been the custom in the past to try to fulfil party pledges during the term of the President elected; we have secured what we set out to get during the first regular session of Congress.

"We have now the best railroad regulation law we ever had. The provisions for the supervision of capitalization were omitted, but this does not mean that they have been abandoned. Renewed effort to enact them will be made at the next session.

"I think the party in power has enacted legislation which will inure greatly to its benefit. It has kept its contract.

"The Congress which is now closing its first regular session has done what it promised the people to do, and the Republican party has a good record to take to the people in the coming elections."

COMPLIMENT TO CITY OF ROSE FESTIVAL IS HIGHLY APPRECIATED

"As the saying goes with men of the newspaper craft, we were given top of the column, next to pure reading matter, by The Christian Science Monitor in its mention of the Portland rose festival, just closed. More than that, we were given a first-page position with double-column head and an attractive cut of one of the most beautifully decorated machines in the automobile parade. It was certainly the intention of The Christian Science Monitor to do the Portland rose festival singular honor, and to pay the people of Portland a high compliment," says the Portland (Ore.) Telegram, which adds:

"As expressing Portland's appreciation, we want to go on record right here and now to the effect that such advertising is of the very best quality. In recording that conclusion, we have taken into account the high character of the paper itself, the quality of the folk among whom it circulates, and, perhaps, more than all, the place in which it is published—cultured Boston.

"It is advertising that puts the most attractive side of Portland's communal character before a large and cultured clientele which is distributed throughout the length and breadth of this great country of ours. It is advertisement that reaches a class of people who hold it as part of their religion to boost and boom those things which tend to the greater appreciation of the beautiful; who hold a city's tribute of honor to the queen of flowers as exceptionally worthy."

"The subject matter of what appears in The Christian Science Monitor has to do with the opening of the festival; and is therefore anticipatory, rather than a report of the various festival events as they actually occurred. But the account is interesting and does ample justice to the event in its entirety.

"We have the means at hand in the immediate neighborhood to make every street, along the festival line of march a continuous bower of floral and verdant beauty. In adjacent environs there grows a wealth of ferns and vines, that with a little expense and ingenious contrivance might be made to serve as a background for the display of banks of rose blossoms in building and street decoration.

"The Christian Science Monitor has not only paid us a high compliment, but it has offered us a valuable suggestion with reference to a general scheme of decorations for future festivals, which we might wisely adopt."

MAYOR TO QUESTION NAMING MR. ERNST FOR RESEARCH WORK

Mayor Fitzgerald is surprised at the action of the finance commission in reporting George A. O. Ernst as the head of the new research bureau at a salary of $5000 a year, and the mayor will at once ask for an opinion from the corporation counsel for an interpretation of the ordinance which the city council passed creating this bureau.

It is generally believed throughout city hall that it was never intended for a head of this bureau to be appointed, but that the finance commission should organize it, appointing on its staff only experts in the specific lines of uplift with which the bureau would have to deal.

It is intimated at city hall that the city council on the occasion of its next meeting will be called upon to rescind the order creating this bureau, and that the attempt to get a real uplift organization which shall work in conjunction with the finance commission will be started anew.

Mr. Ernst was a member of the former finance commission and a political opponent of Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

The finance commission made the appointment and set the salary at $5000 per year and Guy C. Emerson, former superintendent of streets under the late Mayor George A. Hibbard, was named to a position of engineer of the research board.

Mr. Ernst figured in the last municipal campaign as a stanch supporter of the candidacy of James J. Storrow for mayor. He is a Republican in politics. As a member of the original finance commission that drew up the Boston city charter amendments, he came out strongly in favor of acceptance of the set of amendments known as plan 2.

He has made a special study of Massachusetts law in its bearing on the property rights of women and is a believer in the principles of woman suffrage. He has also devoted some attention to literature, contributing to periodicals and translating articles from the French. He is the author of "Law of Married Women in Massachusetts." He has been a member of the Boston Bar Association since 1877 and is identified with a number of social and civic organizations.

OPINION ON CITY MILK INSPECTION

A milk inspection schedule for Boston which shall be drawn up with the assistance of the state board of health is the recommendation of Corporation Counsel Thomas M. Babson of the city of Boston, in replying to Mayor Fitzgerald's request for a ruling on the legality of the adoption by the city of the New York method of inspection, as proposed by Senator George H. Tinkham. Mr. Babson says he believes this method might be legal for Boston, but he also states that Mr. Tinkham secured his information relative to the method from erroneous reports of a New York board.

IMPROVE SCHOOL FIRE ALARMS.

OVERBLOUSE.

6691.
Over Blouse.
32 to 40 bust.

The overblouse that is crossed at the back in surplice style and extended to form a girdle that is closed at the front is a new one and much liked. It can be made of material to match the skirt or of something thinner in matching color as preferred. It is pretty and becoming yet exceedingly simple and easy to make. It is made in one piece and consequently there are only underarm seams to be sewed up. Chiffon is the material illustrated and is trimmed with bands of silk braided with soutache. It is worn over a lace guimpe.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is 2½ yards 21 or 24, 1½ yards 32 or 1¼ yards 44 inches wide with ¾ yard 21 for the trimming portions, ¾ yard of ribbon 2 inches wide for the rosette.

The pattern, No. 6691, may be had in sizes from 32 to 40 inches bust measure and can be obtained at any May Manton agency or will be mailed to any address on receipt of price (10c.) Address 132 East Twenty-third street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

SOME TRIED RECIPES.

A CROWN OF LAMB.

A pleasing change from the usual lamb chop served at luncheon is the crown of lamb, which is nothing more than the same chops from the ribs, of course, divided through the back bone, and not quite through at the flesh side. They are then turned round and shaped into a circle with the flesh side inside. If the ends of the ribs are trimmed cover them with buttered paper while cooking to prevent burning, and then with paper ruffles when served. Usually the chops on each side of the lamb are used, and the two half circles are tied into one, making about 10 or 12 chops in all. Put the crown into a pan in a hot oven, and cook from 15 to 20 minutes, or until the fat is brown and crisp and the flesh pink and juicy. When done remove it to a hot platter, untie and fill the center with peas nicely seasoned. In serving, divide at the bottom and serve one whole chop to each person.

PINEAPPLES AND STRAWBERRIES.

To serve pineapples and strawberries together, pare, core and remove the eyes from one small pineapple and cut into small cubes. Pick over, wash and hull one pint of strawberries. Fill a glass serving dish with alternating layers of cubes of pineapple and strawberries, sprinkling each layer liberally with powdered sugar. Garnish the edges and center of the dish with a few unhulled berries and serve.

FRUIT PUNCH.

Melt two cups of sugar in six cups of boiling water and let it come to a boil. Cool, add one cup of orange juice, one cup of lemon juice, one cup of sirup drained from preserved berries of any kind. Have one half cup of preserved fruit and one-quarter cup of fresh pineapple cut in dice and chilled. Put the fruit in a punch bowl, pour on the cold sirup, and it is ready to serve; if too strong, add chipped ice.

COMPOTE OF GOOSEBERRIES.

Top and tail one quart of gooseberries, which should not be very ripe. Make a pint of syrup and when it boils put in the gooseberries; simmer until the fruit is nicely pulped and tender without being broken; then dish the gooseberries on a glass dish, boil down the syrup for four minutes, pour over the gooseberries and serve cold.

PINEAPPLE PRESERVE.

Pineapples make a delicious preserve if done in this way: Grate half a dozen pineapples and measure. Take three-quarters of a cup of pineapple and fill the cup with cold water; then take a cup of granulated sugar and put into a pot. Boil until the pineapple becomes clear, skimming frequently to remove all the scum that comes to the top. When the syrup clings to the spoon it is done and should stand until it is cool before putting it into the glasses.—Philadelphia Record.

SPONGE CAKE.

Beat two eggs, yolks and whites together, until very light. Add one cup sugar. Stir several minutes. Add one cup flour with one rounded teaspoon baking powder. Then add slowly one-half cup boiling water. Flavor with lemon. Pour at once into papered, greased pan and bake as usual. The amateur cook need not be afraid the batter is too thin. This makes a large and inexpensive cake.

STRAIGHT PLAITED SKIRT.

6695—Straight Plaited Skirt.
22 to 30 waist.

The simple skirt that gives the effect of a tunic is one greatly liked. Here is a model that is exceedingly graceful, yet which produces that result. It is perfectly straight, laid in tucks at the upper edge, but these tucks are stitched flat to do away with all bulk. The wide tuck at flounce depth gives the tunic suggestion. It may be well to add that the skirt could be made of two materials with ease and success, the two being joined beneath the wide tuck.

The quality of material required for the medium size is 8½ yards 24 or 27, 7 yards 32 or 5⅝ yards 44 inches wide. Width of skirt at lower edge is 4¼ yards or 2 yards when plaits are pressed flat.

The pattern, No. 6695, may be had in sizes from 22 to 30 inches waist measure or 39 to 49 inches hip measure and both measurements ought to be given when ordering skirts. It can be obtained at any May Manton agency, or will be mailed to any address on receipt of price (10c.). Address 132 East Twenty-third street, New York; or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

MANCHESTER PAPER ASSERTS CHANGE IS PENDING FOR EGYPT

MANCHESTER, Eng. — Exclusive cables to the United Press two weeks ago to the effect that England was considering a change of administration in Egypt are confirmed today by the Manchester Guardian.

"There is good authority," the Guardian says, "for the statement that the foreign office, despite Sir Edward Grey's recent eulogy of Sir Eldon Gorst, has decided to recall Sir Eldon from Egypt and to appoint in his place Sir Arthur Hardinge, minister to Belgium, who is cousin of Sir Charles Hardinge, newly appointed viceroy of India."

Sir Eldon is the British agent and consul-general in Egypt and there has been a demand by many of the Conservatives for his recall ever since he was inferentially criticized by Mr. Roosevelt in his famous Guildhall speech. Mr. Roosevelt urged a stronger hand in the rule of Europe and Sir Arthur Hardinge is believed to be the man who will give such a rule.

COLEMAN IS TAKEN TO PRISON.

George W. Coleman, the Cambridge bank looter, in charge of United States Deputy Marshal James Waters, and accompanied by his father and his brother Frank, this morning started from the East Cambridge jail for Greenfield, Mass., where Coleman will begin his sentence of 15 years. PRESIDENT'S FAMILY BEGIN A BUSY DAY AT THE BEVERLY PLACE

BEVERLY, Mass.—The Beverly season at the "summer capital" opened today, and, with the arrival of President Taft, which is expected as soon as Congress adjourns, the city on the North Shore will assume the front rank in news importance.

The Taft family with the exception of the President slept their first night at the Evans cottage, Burgess Point, Thursday. Mrs. Taft, with Miss Taft, Charlie and Robert Taft, reached Boston Thursday and were met by the Taft motor car and driven along the shore boulevard to Burgess Point. Robert Taft did not come with the party to Beverly, but stopped over in Boston to watch a few innings of the Harvard and Yale game. Mrs. Taft enjoyed a stroll about the Evans estate in the evening.

This morning Charlie Taft was up bright and early and as soon as breakfast was over pulled out to the Sylph anchored at Burgess Point and made friends with Capt. Charles R. Train, the new commander. Robert Taft drove over to the Myopia Hunt Club and Miss Taft, after spending a portion of the morning with her mother, went for a short drive in her new electric motor.

This afternoon Mrs. Taft will go for an automobile drive, accompanied by Miss Taft and her elder son.

Everything is in readiness for the arrival of the President, even the famous Jersey cow, which supplies the milk for the family, is expected tomorrow.

The executive office people are expected to arrive before July 1, and their quarters in the Board of Trade building are ready for immediate occupancy. The Postal Telegraph Company opened their offices in the Board of Trade building today and the Western Union will follow suit.

The common council and the board of aldermen have issued an order for a flag to fly every day from the city hall during the President's stay in Beverly.

NEW LONDON MEN RESCUED AT SEA

Capt. Edward Leighton and George Bruce of New London are today rejoicing over their safe arrival at Lewis wharf after two days off Highland light without food and water, or gasoline with which to propel their big 36-foot water boat, the Pilgrim.

The men started from New London Saturday. Tuesday night they discovered their supplies were running short, and at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning their gasoline tank was empty and their engine chugged no more. Thursday evening the men were picked up by Captain Wall of the towboat Mercury.

STOCKS DECLINE AGAIN SHARPLY IN WALL STREET

Early Display of Firmness by Leading Securities Is Followed by Weakness and Lower Prices Generally.

BOSTON STOCKS OFF

Although price movements at the opening of the New York market this morning showed some irregularity, the fact that Steel started off ⅜ higher and Union Pacific ⅝ higher than last night's closing prices gave encouragement to traders on the bull side and shortly the market as a whole showed improvement.

The return to this country yesterday of J. P. Morgan from his European trip was regarded as a very favorable event. Although he had nothing to say for publication on financial topics Wall street takes it for granted that he will soon become actively interested in the market.

Tips have been in circulation that both Reading and Steel were to have a rise. There was a report that Reading was to have an extra dividend and that an extra distribution might be made on Steel common. Reading opened unchanged at 157¼ and gained ⅞ during the early sales.

The local market was somewhat unsteady at the opening, the coppers showing distinct weakness during the first sales. North Butte opened off ⅝ at 27.

The session had not made much progress before prices began to decline. Business was of smaller volume than yesterday and quotations sagged off more from the lack of support than on account of any particular pressure. Reading declined under 156 before noon. Union Pacific at midday was selling around 171½. Great Northern preferred opened up ¼ at 132¼, advanced to 132¾ and sold off nearly 3 points. Chesapeake & Ohio opened unchanged at 81, declined to 80⅝, advanced to 81⅞ and again declined to 80⅝ before noon. St. Paul opened at 127⅛ and sold down under 125.

The industrials shared in the weakness. Amalgamated Copper opened unchanged at 65¼ and after advancing fractionally sold off over a point. Steel declined to 77¾ and then rallied fractionally.

The local market was heavy, following the decline in New York. Lake Copper opened unchanged at 53¼, rose ¼ and then declined over a point. Calumet & Arizona opened off ⅛ at 54, advanced ¼ and then lost the gain. Calumet & Hecla was off 2 points at 543. North Butte declined a good fraction.

A letter addressed by Attorney-General Wickersham to Chairman Tawney of the House appropriation committee stating that the law department of the government was now carrying on "quite a number of investigations" regarding alleged illegal combinations was most largely responsible for the heavy market today. Prices during the afternoon were lower than the forenoon level and support was very insignificant.

LONDON—American shares closed firm at the official session but broke on the curb 1 to 2 points in sympathy with your market.

Canadian stocks failed to show any improvement in final dealings. There was also an absence of rallying disposition in investment issues. As a matter of fact the impending settlement has caused a general listlessness.

Bourses ended irregular.

THE COTTON MARKET.

NEW YORK—The cotton market opened steady, 3 points lower to 2 points higher. June 14.96c, July 15c, August 14.73c, September 13.15c, October 12.47c, November 12.32c, December 12.25c, January 12.21c, March 12.21c, May 12.24c.

LIVERPOOL—Spot cotton inactive; prices easier. American middling uplands 8.05. Sales 3000. Receipts none. Futures opened steady. Tenders, new 200.

HEAVY LIVE STOCK RECEIPTS.

CHICAGO—The Commonwealth-Edison Company has paid the city $325,313 annual compensation for the year ended May 31, as follows: 3 per cent of $10,824,469 derived from the sale of current, and 10 per cent on $5792 derived from rental of conduit space.

ENGLAND'S DEBT.

LONDON—There has been an increase of more than $55,000,000 in the English national debt during the past year, according to a statement issued by the treasury, the total deadweight debt being roundly $3,566,000,000 on the first of April and the total gross liabilities $3,812,000,000.

MEAT CONSUMPTION OF UNITED STATES IS MUCH SMALLER

Net Profits of Swift & Co. for Eight Months of Fiscal Period Three Per Cent Less Than Last Year.

CATTLE SITUATION

Net profits of Swift & Co. for the first eight months of the current fiscal year which ends Sept. 30 next are understood to have been running at the rate of about 10 per cent on the $60,000,000 stock. This compares with 13 per cent in 1909 and 15 per cent in 1908. For the last month or two sales and net profits have been normal, but the six months from October to April was rather lean picking, both in the packing business itself and in the manufacturing department. The latter is the means by which the packers convert by-products into various articles of commercial utility and it is in this department in a normal year that the bulk of net profits are realized.

All of the big packers, however, have been fairly right on futures, so that their speculative profits have made up much of the deficiency in actual earnings from operation.

While net profits are showing a comfortable margin above the 7 per cent rate, it is probable that gross sales in 1910 will drop considerably below any year since 1906. In 1907 Swift & Co. did $250,000,000 of gross, followed by a drop of $10,000,000 to $240,000,000 in 1908 and a further advance in 1909 to about $250,000,000. If this year's sales do not get considerably below the $240,000,000 mark, it will be because of a sudden and unexpected picking up in the volume of business from that which has prevailed for the last eight months.

There is no question that partly from necessity and partly because it has become something of a popular fad, the meat consumption of the United States during the last year has decreased between 6 per cent and 8 per cent and some authorities place the drop at as high as 10 per cent. This letting down in demand has in one way been a blessing in disguise, as, with the shortage in supply, which at one time promised to become acute, higher prices would otherwise have been inevitable.

Swift & Co. have made more money than in any recent year in their poultry and dairy department, and, in the expansion of this particular branch of their huge business, have stolen something of a march on the other big Chicago packers. There has been good money in poultry and dairy products, which has helped out in the total overturn.

There is no doubt that some of the Chicago packers have been taking a serious view of the cattle situation in the West. One authority, citing the case of Montana, states that several of the grazing states will next year have less than 50 per cent of the cattle herded a few years ago. In Montana 20,000 and 40,000 herds have this year been cut down to a few thousand and thousands of acres of grazing lands have been thrown into grain.

The hog situation is righting itself, however, and, although a shortage this fall is expected, the Chicago packers think that with the turn of the year good supplies will begin to come and that a year from now the supply will be nearly normal. There is no question that the recent record quotations for hogs have proved a lodestone to thousands of western farmers and in a few years there is more likelihood of overproduction than of shortage.

NEW HAVEN TO INCREASE RATES

WASHINGTON—The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company has filed with the interstate commerce commission increases in commutation rates effective July 23. There is no change in the rates out of Boston to Canton Junction and New Haven, Conn.

From Springfield, Mass., to Melrose, Fenway and other points in Connecticut the increase varies from 10 to 35 cents, from Worcester to Webster, Southbridge, New London, etc., 5 to 15 cents; from New Haven, Willimantic and Providence to Portland, Providence Summit, etc., 5 to 30 cents; from Willimantic to Manchester, Poughkeepsie, etc., 5 to 60 cents; from Boston, Franklin and Willimantic to Franklin, Providence, etc., 5 to 20 cents; from New York to New Rochelle, N. Y., Springfield, Mass., etc., the only change is a reduction in miles of two miles.

This tariff also applies between intermediate points.

GERMAN FINANCIAL SITUATION EXHIBITS MUCH IMPROVEMENT

Markets Little Affected by Irregularity Here and Conditions Industrially Are Considered Favorable.

THE MONEY OUTLOOK

FRANKFORT-ON-MAIN — The recent irregularity and excitement in New York had only limited effect here. Our speculators have done very good business in the last month, and the improved conditions, particularly in our industrial market, had a salutary effect.

Regarding the new loan made by the Southern Pacific Company with an international syndicate—Kuhn, Loeb & Co., of New York; Disconto-Gesellschaft, of Berlin; Handelsgesellschaft, of Berlin; Warnburg, of Hamburg, and others, the Berlin Tageblatt says: "We are very sorry that the German financial world is not more opposed to American propositions. Neither the experience of German capital with American securities nor the situation of the German money market can tend to stimulate interest in American finances."

This is a decidedly narrow viewpoint. The financial world need not consider things from the present situation, and the argument is not correct. On the whole, German capitalists in southern Germany, particularly in Frankfort, have made large fortunes in American state and railway bonds.

In Paris, too, some newspapers take advantage of the depression in New York cables to cry against the American bond invasion. But French capitalists are compelled to go abroad, and the Mexican conversion is completely adapted to the modest demands of French capitalists. It is altogether improbable that the new Mexican loan at the present high price will find buyers in Germany. Our public likes to realize an income of at least 5 per cent on foreign securities; consequently, it is possible that German capitalists holding 5 per cent gold Mexican loan bonds will not care to take the new 4 per cent issue. They look, therefore, for other 5 per cent bonds, and there will be some room for new American loans.

Recent reports of our principal financial institutions evidence the large open accounts of our speculating public. One critic says: "The markets are like an overheated steam boiler and the public is sitting on the valve." As long as the industrial reports are good, overspeculation will not be considered an evil; but with scarcity of money and a lack of new investors, the situation may become more critical. The Moroccan loan was a great success. The price of 96¾ for a 5 per cent loan proved attractive.

The new potash syndicate has been formed, and it is hoped that the quiet ensuing will result in favorable development.

RUSSIAN PUBLIC DEBT IS LARGE

LONDON—On Jan. 1 the total state indebtedness of Russia amounted to 9,038,756,400 roubles ($4,519,375,000). The payment of arrears absorbed in 1909 $189,970,000 and the sinking fund $12,848,500. A sinking fund appropriation of two-ninths per cent per annum does not seem to involve a particularly rapid extinction of the borrowed principal.

The total amount disbursed in the service of the various loans during the year aggregated $202,820,000. If this sum be allowed to enter into a rough calculation as interest payable on the above total of $4,519,375,000 borrowed money, the rate involved is a little less than 4½ per cent.

PIG IRON SHOWS LITTLE ACTIVITY

The pig iron market during the past week has shown a little activity, although the situation is not especially strong. Competition is brisk and buyers are not anxious to cover for large amounts at this time.

Foundries report good business and shipments are coming along in a manner satisfactory to the furnaces; in fact, a few requests for anticipated shipment have been received. Coke remains stationary in price and is in good demand.

STEEL RAIL MILLS BUSY

NEW YORK—Steel rail mills are more actively employed than for some time. Most of them are working on old orders, new business over the last two weeks having been small.

Inquiries in the local market aggregate more than 60,000 tons, and foreign inquiries run up well toward 75,000 tons.

UNDERWOOD TYPEWRITER REPORT

NEW YORK—The Underwood Typewriter Company reports earnings for May, $80,081, increase $30,888; for five months ended May 31, $480,636, increase $156,519. Earnings given for five months are after appropriating over $50,000 for depreciation.

THE GRAIN MARKET.

C. F. & G. W. Eddy, Inc., of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, received the following from their Chicago correspondent:

Wheat—The wheat market was active at new high levels. The opening was lower on reports of lower temperatures and scattered showers in the Northwest, but there immediately developed heavy buying and prices advanced 2 to 3 cents from the low point. The official report showed rains in the Dakotas, and there were generally lower temperatures with private reports of showers at a number of points. The rains were not considered sufficient, however, and the market became very excited and strong. There were good rains again in Manitoba, and the weather was favorable in the winter wheat districts for maturing and cutting the crop.

Foreign markets were quiet, with exports from different countries about the same as expected. The Russian and Argentine advices as well as the advices from India are of a favorable character.

Corn—The market was active with prices slightly lower at the opening, but they soon gained strength and advanced with other grain. There was considerable buying on reports of dry, hot weather, and the buying by shorts seemed to be on a large scale.

Oats—Trade in oats was active and market strong. The market was influenced by the very decidedly unfavorable reports from the Northwest as to the effect of the dry weather and the heat on the crop. Prices were also influenced by the pronounced strength in other grains, and buying of new crop deliveries was active and aggressive.

THE COPPER METAL MARKET CONTINUES IN A QUIET STATE

Consumers Take Advantage of Low Prices but Refrain From Buying Ahead in Very Large Quantities.

EUROPEAN PROSPECT

The July requirements of the American consumers of copper have now been pretty well filled through sales effected last week at 12½ cents, for the most part, by competitors of the United Metals Selling Company. Cash quotations for the metal are 12⅝ cents.

The United Metals Selling Company has made no sales of account since last March, when heavy commitments, mostly for May delivery, were booked. Since the former month this agency has played a "waiting game" and maintained its nominal asking price for electrolytic copper at 13 cents.

It is now figured that the United Metals Selling Company must have at least 100,000,000 pounds of unsold copper on its hands. The wisdom of its policy is doubted in some quarters, but the fact remains that while the largest copper selling agency in the world sees fit to name what is considered an artificial price for its product, its competitors have placed themselves in a strong position by selling all the copper they can, even if concessions had to be made.

American manufacturers have been and are still running on small supplies of copper and their bins were well nigh depleted when last week they were able to replace their stocks at 12½ cents. Consumers took advantage of this low level by buying a month ahead; further than this they would not commit themselves, even at further concessions.

The immediate future of copper hinges on the action of the United Metals Selling Company officials who are still in Europe.

"So long as the United Metals Selling Company 'holds the umbrella' for the rest of us," says the selling agent for a small group of mines, "just so much better off the independents will be, for we will all be able to keep sold pretty well ahead, even though prices are not quite so high as we would like to have them. Should the Selling company decide to unload its accumulation at a price lower than that at which we have sold, we, of course, will have to meet it, but the chances are that the end of the year will show that our policy of selling whenever possible will result in an average price fully as high as that of any client of the United Metals Selling Company."

New York has a report that Calumet & Hecla has cut its price and effected sales. At the time of the last Copper Producers Association meeting Calumet & Hecla copper was 13¼ cents, at which level it had been sold. On the same day the independent electrolytic sellers had worked their price up 12½ cents to 12⅞ cents, but the subsequent reaction had worked the price back to 12⅝@12⅛ cents.

PENNSYLVANIA'S NEW STATION.

CHICAGO—Pennsylvania officials say they are still in working agreement with the other roads using the Union station, therefore no ordinance covering the erection of a new station will be drafted for some time.

EXPENSES OF BURLINGTON SHOW EXTRAORDINARY GAIN

Although Gross Income is Nearly Eight Millions Larger in Ten Months Expenses are Nearly Eight Millions Larger—Strong Financially.

In common with other great western railroad systems Chicago, Burlington & Quincy is this fiscal year experiencing an extraordinary increase in expenses. Although gross in the 10 months to April 30 increased $7,905,276, or 11 per cent, a jump in expenses of $7,846,740 has resulted in a net gain of but $58,000.

A comparison of income accounts covering 10 months of the 1910 and 1909 fiscal years, with charges estimated, follows:

	1910.	1909.	Increase.
Gross	$73,951,389	$66,046,113	$7,905,275
Expenses	54,378,700	46,531,960	7,846,740
Net	$19,572,689	$19,514,153	$58,536
Chgs, 10 mo.	7,800,000	7,800,000	.....
Surplus	$11,772,689	$11,714,153	$59,536
Per cent on $110,000,000 stock	11.0	11.0	.....

At the average rate per ton mile which Burlington received in 1909 the above addition of $7,905,279 in gross represents a sale in transportation service amounting to fully 1,000,000,000 ton miles. Yet apparently it has meant nothing so far as the share profits are concerned.

An analysis of the expense figures, however, shows that $4,719,067 or 60 per cent of the increase in expenses went into maintenance. Comparison with previous years discloses the fact that 1910 maintenance expenditures will be the greatest in the history of the property:

	Maintenance— Way.	Equipment.	mainten.
10 mo., 1910.	$12,569,910	$12,849,696	$25,419,516
10 mo., 1909.	9,083,278	11,017,131	20,700,409
Year, 1909...	13,203,214	13,510,266	26,713,480
Year, 1907...	14,445,867	14,725,632	29,171,499

Maintenance this year has been at the rate of $2,540,000 per month, or $30,400,000 for the year. This exceeds the 1907 showing, the previous record year.

The Burlington, under James J. Hill, in nine years has increased its maintenance charged to operation by over 70 per cent. The change is graphically pictured in the following:

	1910. 10 months.	1901. 12 months.	Increase.
Main. way..	$12,569,910	$8,676,028	$3,893,882
Main. equip	12,849,696	6,094,872	6,754,734
Totals ...	$25,419,516	$14,770,900	$10,648,606

If maintenance continues through May and June at the rate prevailing for the 10 months, the increase in 1910 over 1901 will be $15,629,100, or 105 per cent.

How much "fat" has accumulated in Burlington's system by reason of its great maintenance is somewhat of a mystery outside the inner sanctum of the Hill court. A few facts, however, prove that it must be enormous.

Since 1901, the Burlington has been developed to a state of efficiency unsurpassed by any other great system in this country. In a nutshell its accomplishment may be measured in the following:

	1909.	1901.	% inc.
Ton miles ..	7,860,000,000	3,870,000,000	100
Train miles.	16,118,170	19,168,750	*15

*Decrease.

The road has just doubled its service sales and has performed it with 15 per cent less effort.

We may search the reports of every railroad in America in vain for a parallel to this remarkable showing.

Yet Burlington has had less new money from capital and surplus sources than any other road of its size. Disregarding discount and refunding, the company received from June 30, 1901, to June 30, 1909, $57,984,000 from sale of bonds. No other obligations were created. Adding 1171 miles of new road, at an average cost of, say $20,000 per mile, there would be left of this new money $34,427,000 for internal development.

In eight years the aggregate surplus for dividends in round figures has been $100,000,000 of which $70,000,000 has been paid in dividends, leaving $30,000,000 to boil into the property. Thus a total of between $64,000,000 and $65,000,000 has been available for internal improvements.

To believe that such a sum has been sufficient to bring Burlington up to its present state of efficiency would be absurdity itself. It is but $7000 per mile. One can hardly find a road of any size that has spent less than $100,000,000 in its development work alone in the past few years. Take Atchison. It spent nearly $75,000,000 in the three years 1906-1908 and probably spent over $100,0000,000 in that period, taking into account surplus applied to reconstruction, etc. Even in New England on the 2000-mile New Haven, President Mellen has spent in six or seven years over $130,000,000.

Of course we cannot compare Burlington with any other road and arrive at any very definite conclusion. But Burlington's expenditures in eight years from capital and surplus have been so very small by contrast with other systems, that the conclusion is inevitable that the present state of the property to a great extent is due to over-maintenance.

Where the enormous equity that has accumulated behind the Burlington shares will go, there is little question. Mr. Hill's generosity as a melon cutter is too well established to leave much doubt. The road will be in shape some day for Great Northern and Northern Pacific stockholders, and when it is Mr. Hill may be depended upon to live up to his reputation for generosity. Substantial extra dividends might be paid annually on Great Northern and Northern Pacific from the Burlington surplus. It is the soundest and biggest melon Mr. Hill has ever raised.

WESTERN FARMERS HOLDING CORN

NEW YORK—Old crop corn is now selling at about 59 cents a bushel for October or 10 cents less than a year ago. At lower prices western farmers are holding their corn reserve this season somewhat more firmly than usual, until the outcome of the new crop is more fully determined.

On May 1, Illinois had in producers' hands nearly 69,000,000 bushels, or 30 per cent of the crop of 233,000,000 bushels, compared with 29 per cent last year and 24 per cent the year before.

FINANCIAL NOTES

A slightly firmer tendency in money is noted in Paris.

Tanners reported heavy losses on the break in hides prices.

London is reported as showing much more cheerful sentiment on Americans; cheap money prospects the main influence.

The state corporation commission of Virginia denies the petition of Washington Southern Railroad Company to increase passenger rates from 2½ to 3 cents a mile.

Donald P. Stubbs, son of Traffic Director Stubbs of the Harriman lines, has been appointed general agent of the system, with headquarters in Cleveland, effective July 1.

Gilbert Gannon and Carl Remington of New York, directly representing the Chesapeake & Ohio interests, purchased the Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville railroad at foreclosure sale this afternoon for $5,200,000.

OUR TRADE WITH COUNTRIES OF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE

Exports of United States Increase Eighty-Five Millions in Eleven Months, While There Is a Decrease of Fourteen Millions to Eastern Hemisphere.

WASHINGTON—An increase of $85,000,000 in exports from the United States to other countries of the western hemisphere and a decrease of $14,000,000 in those to the eastern hemisphere during the 11 months of the current fiscal year is an interesting fact developed by an analysis of the year's trade made by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor.

The figures show that the gains in exports occurred in those parts of the world in which manufactures form the bulk of the merchandise imported, while the losses occurred in those countries in which foodstuffs constitute an important part of the import trade. Of the domestic exports to the various grand divisions last year, manufactures formed, in the case of North America, 60 per cent, South America over 85 per cent, Oceania 85 per cent, and Africa 60 per cent of the total, and to these sections of the world the exports from the United States increased; while in the case of Europe, to which manufactures formed nearly 30 per cent and foodstuffs 31 per cent of the exports, and Asia, to which manufactures formed 70 per cent and foodstuffs 10 per cent of the exports from the United States there were decreases during the year.

The new world is rapidly increasing the share which it takes of products of the United States and is, as shown by the figures already quoted, responsible for practically all the gain of 71,000,000 made in the exports of the United States. While Oceania shows a gain of 8,000,000 and Africa a gain of $1,000,000 in the value of exports thereto during the 11 months, their gain of $9,000,000 is more than offset by a loss of $23,000,000 in exports to Europe and Asia.

In 1890 America took 15½ per cent of the total exports from the United States; in 1900 16½ per cent and in the fiscal year now closing will take over 26 per cent, unless the month of June should develop a marked decline in the share of the export trade going to American countries.

Twenty years ago the exports to all America from the United States were valued at $133,000,000 dollars, in 1910 they will probably exceed $475,000,000; their relation to the total exports having increased, as already indicated, from 15½ to more than 26 per cent. This means a gain in exports to America in 20 years of more than 250 per cent, while to all other parts of the world the exports from the United States were increasing but 80 per cent.

Considering separately the exports to the various grand divisions, those from the United States to North America during the 11 months' period increased from $280,000,000 in 1909 to nearly $350,000,000 in 1910; those to South America, from $70,000,000 in 1909 to about $85,000,000 in 1910; those to Oceania, from $37,000,000 in 1909 to $45,000,000 in 1910, and those to Africa from less than $16,000,000 in 1909 to about $17,000,000 in 1910; while exports to Europe meantime decreased from $1,077,000,000 in the 11 months ending with May, 1909, to $1,065,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1910, and those to Asia from $65,500,000 to about $55,000,000.

The relative changes in the exports to the various grand divisions were, therefore, to North America, a gain of 25 per cent; South America, a gain of about 20 per cent; Oceania, a gain of 20 per cent, and Africa, a gain of nearly 10 per cent; and to Asia, a decrease of about 15 per cent, and to Europe a decrease of about 1 per cent.

The principal gains made in the exports to North America occurred in the trade with Canada, Mexico, Panama and Cuba. To Canada exports from the United States increased from $147,000,000 in the 11 months ending with May, 1909, to over $194,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1910; to Mexico, from $46,000,000 to $53,000,000; to Cuba, from $40,000,000 to about $48,000,000; and to Panama, from $15,000,000 to nearly $19,000,000.

To Bermuda, British Honduras and all the Central American states except Salvador the exports of the present year show substantial gains over those of the corresponding period of last year.

While the individual increases made in the exports to the various South American countries are not so large as in the various sections of North America, they extend to nearly all its important political divisions.

To Argentina the 11 months' exports increased from less than $31,000,000 in 1909 to $37,000,000 in 1910; those to Brazil, from less than $16,000,000 to nearly $21,000,000; those to Chile, from about $5,000,000 to $7,750,000; to Uruguay, from $3,000,000 to nearly $4,000,000; to Colombia, from $3,333,333 to $3,500,000; to Ecuador, from $1,666,666 to $2,000,000; to Venezuela, from $2,333,333 to $2,500,000; while exports to Dutch Guiana gained $100,000, and those to Paraguay gained about $15,000. Slight decreases occurred in the exports to the remaining countries of South America; in the case of British Guiana, about $100,000; Bolivia, $150,000; Peru, $120,000, and French Guiana, nearly $40,000.

Manufactures largely predominate in the exports to both North and South America. Of the agricultural implements exported from the United States during the current year, valued at approximately $30,000,000, about $12,000,000 worth went to American countries. Of the automobiles exported, now approaching $10,000,000 per annum, about 40 per cent went to Canada alone; of the cotton cloths, nearly one half went to countries of the western hemisphere, chiefly the West Indies, Cuba, Central America, Canada, Colombia and Chile; of the technical instruments exported, Canada and Brazil led all other parts of the world as countries of destination; of steel rails exported, five sixths went to American countries, about equally divided between North and South America.

Mexico is the largest market for American mining machinery, also for pipes and fittings; Cuba leads as a market for boots and shoes; Canada is the first as a market for books, maps and engravings exported from the country, while Argentina is only second to the United Kingdom in its annual purchases of American lumber.

Southern Pacific Company Considering Project of Extending Llano Branch to Connect With 'Frisco Road

AUSTIN, Tex.—The Southern Pacific Company has under consideration the project of extending its Llano branch west to a connection with the Ft. Worth and Rio Grande division of the 'Frisco, which is now being extended southwest from Brady to Menardville.

The extension of the Southern Pacific will be about 75 miles long, and, if conditions are deemed favorable, it may be extended all the way to a connection with the transcontinental line of the Southern Pacific at Sanderson, Tex., 250 miles.

The prospects are favorable for considerable activity in the development of the iron ore field in the vicinity of Llano. The owners of these ore bodies have been doing a large amount of exploration work recently, and are said to have developed a very large tonnage of ore. The Southern Pacific is said to be making preparations to have large quantities of the ore taken from the Llano district to Galveston for shipment to eastern works.

Julius Kruttschnitt of Chicago, vice-president and director of maintenance and operation of the Southern Pacific, and officials of the Texas lines of that company, recently visited Llano and made a personal investigation of the situation with regard to this prospective traffic and the proposed extension of the road west from that point.

Two railroads are being constructed south from the coal fields of Erath and other countries of that section, with Llano as their southern objective point. The completion of these roads will place the iron ore and the coal fields within 150 miles of each other, and it is expected that this will bring about the establishment of iron and steel works in the Llano district.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

The committee appointed by President Joseph B. Russell of the Boston real estate commission to confer with a committee of the city council in regard to the proposed ordinance defining charges for coal holes, bay windows, sidewalk vaults, etc., met at city hall recently. The results of the conference were considered satisfactory, and it is expected that the ordinance as finally reported will be fair to all real estate interests. Chairman Hale and Councillors Collins and Attridge acted for the council, and Messrs. Elwyn G. Preston, John Mason Little, A. C. Ratshesky, Henry F. Ross and Sec.-Treas. Frederic H. Viaux represented the exchange at the conference.

Fully 200 members and guests of the Massachusetts real estate exchange will participate in the automobile trip through the eastern and central part of the state, which will be taken next Tuesday and Wednesday. Although this trip was planned to enable Boston brokers and agents to view the many improvements going on in the central part of the commonwealth, the principal object is to stimulate interest in real estate in the various cities and towns to be visited, and to lay the foundations for exchanges to be formed and affiliated with the Massachusetts exchange.

LICENSING BOARD FOR THE
CITY OF BOSTON
29 PEMBERTON SQ.

To the Holders of Licenses to Sell Intoxicating Liquors in the City of Boston, Owners of Real Estate and Others Interested.

Under date of March 22, 1910, the Licensing Board called the attention of all licensees to the fourth condition of their licenses in which are described those persons (minors, intoxicated persons and others) to whom liquor must not be sold.

The Board once more not only calls the attention of licensees to this condition of their licenses, but also emphasizes its opinion that the sale of liquor to a minor of either sex (that is, a person under the age of twenty-one years) has been and is regarded by it as one of the most serious violations of the law. The law also forbids a licensee to allow a minor to loiter upon the licensed premises, and the Board again requests that licensees prevent, so far as possible, the presence on the premises of all minors unaccompanied by their parents or guardians, or the loitering about the premises of all minors, especially young women, newsboys, messenger boys and others. The board insists that licensees, especially innholders and those conducting cafes and restaurants, prevent their establishments from being used as loitering places by all persons, men or women, whose conduct is conducive to disorder.

Licensees are reminded that by vote of the Board June 18, 1907, of which notice was duly given, only those licensees (except innholders) who have been specifically granted the privilege, may serve women with liquor to be drunk on the premises and then only at tables.

The Board repeats its statement that it objects to the display, in or about the premises of any holder of a liquor license, of any Political Poster, Political Cartoon, Political Portrait or Political Advertisement, and requests that licensees permit no such display; also that it objects to the circulation on such premises of Nomination Papers in behalf of any candidate for any office and to the solicitation on such premises by licensees or their employees of signatures to such papers, and again requests that such circulation and solicitation be not allowed by licensees.

Because of repeated requests for transfers and new locations resulting in part from recent legislation, the Board states for the information of all interested that during the present license year no transfers of liquor licenses of any kind whatsoever into suburban districts will be granted.

With due regard to present conditions, the Board will hereafter apply the legal restrictions governing the location of liquor licenses in the vicinity of public schools to well established PRIVATE SCHOOLS of acknowledged standing.

SAMUEL H. HUDSON,

THE HOME FORUM

The King and Carisbrooke Castle

HISTORY, that we are so accustomed to regard merely as a narrative, should as a matter of fact be treated rather as an analysis of cause and effect, and examined in the light of perspective. Thus when Oliver Goldsmith, best known, perhaps, to many of us simply as the author of the "Vicar of Wakefield," said that "history owes its excellence more to the writer's manner than to the materials of which it is composed," he really implied that it was not so much the facts that were chronicled as the actual method of narrating them that constituted good history. A bare statement, clothed though it be with character and local color, even if draped with all the ingenuity of the descriptive art, makes at best but poor reading, without other qualities in some degree at least.

Curiously enough, the Isle of Wight, of which Carisbrooke happens to be almost the exact center, is conspicuously lacking in eventful records, apart from the story of this old ruin and its ivy-clad walls, with its dignified looking keep, its pretty picturesque gateway, and the lovely view from its battlements. Accepting, therefore, in brief the fact that Charles I. was a prisoner here for the space of a year or so, and that his attempted escape through a window proved unsuccessful, let us see in what relation these stand to contemporary events in England during the middle '40s of the seventeenth century.

The series of misunderstandings that culminated in what is generally known as the "great rebellion" was not a disagreement between classes, nor between King and people, but rather the outcome of the gradual evolution of parliamentary principles, calling for more constitutional methods of government. This had been developing step by step for a very long period, even under the masterly hand of the Tudors, though we may well doubt whether these events would have followed when they did had Henry VIII. and Charles I. changed places.

After the surrender of Oxford, Charles found himself not only without an army, but to all intents and purposes without a party. The Parliament, that long Parliament so much ridiculed and yet so famous, had commenced by being the master of the army, now the army was the master of the Parliament, and Cromwell, though perhaps not yet openly, was really the master of both. There was, however, still a fourth party required to complete the political quartet, and one which throughout, though seeming to form but a side issue, was really of great importance, namely the Scots. This was in the spring of 1646, and statesmanship seemed to demand either the unraveling of this heterogeneous political medley, or that the King should identify himself with one or other of these parties. It was at this juncture that he elected to go to the camp of the Scots, that lay then as far south from the border as Newark. They, for reasons too lengthy for discussion here, delivered him to the Parliament, whose commissioners lodged him in Holmby house, whence the army, stepping forward in the person of Cornet Joyce, without further ceremony removed him to Hampton court.

Perhaps it will never be known exactly what motive prompted the King's next move, even Clarendon, his faithful follower, friend and historian, seems doubtful about it, for getting on horseback one evening he rode off accompanied only by two or three of his attendants. His subsequent reappearance on the Hampshire coast, after spending a day and a half in the saddle, makes it reasonable to suppose that it was probably his intention to make for the continent or the Channel islands, though this is only surmise.

But now to make a longish story short. No ship was at hand, whether one had been expected or no. Negotiations were then opened with one Colonel Hammond, a stanch supporter of the army and recently appointed to the governorship of the Isle of Wight. An interview followed and Charles subsequently returned with him, apparently without any particular terms. It was in this way that he came to Carisbrooke in the autumn of 1647.

The Joy of Life

Live joyously! And let no bitterness
Settle in memory's cup, to mar the sweet
Rich flavor of the draught Life holds for thee—
Holds every day our eager lips to meet.
Let no defeat nor disappointment mar,
Live joyously and gladly every hour.

Live busily! With quiet diligence.
Add daily to thy wealth of work well done;
With things worth while, though small or great they seem.
Fill every passing hour from sun to sun.
No time to waste on blame or vain regret.
Live busily the best, all else forget.

Live lovingly! not thine to criticize
Thy brothers' errors, nor thy neighbor's sinning.
Hard words won't ease their pain, nor make them well,
Nor brace their courage for a fresh beginning.
Not every one's abandoned who goes wrong.
Live lovingly, and thank God you are strong. . . .

Housekeeper's Reason

"What is your chief objection to moving pictures?" "The dust that has accumulated behind them."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

It is almost unnecessary to attempt to enumerate the benefits good roads confer on a people. Every man, no matter how unlettered, should instinctively know that a good road is a far better thing to have than a bad road.

Some Modern Painters

WITH the exhibition and purchase of certain pictures each year by the trustees under the terms of the Chantrey bequest from the works of the year's Royal Academy, interest in the collection which has found its home at Millbank annually takes new life, says the Westminster Gazette. A selection of Chantrey pictures are reproduced in the June Windsor Magazine, from the works of Briton Riviere, R.A., David Murray, R.A., Herbert Draper, Hubert von Herkomer, R.A., George Clausen, R.A., Frank Dicksee, R.A., W. L. Wyllie, R.A., and other famous artists—the special colored plate being from Vicat Cole's fine painting, "The Pool of London." It was in 1877 that the method of the expenditure of Sir Francis Chantrey's bequest was first decided upon.

The earliest pictures to be bought from the bequest were Frank Dicksee's "Harmony," William Frederick Yeames' dramatic "Amy Robsart," William Hilton's "Christ Crowned With Thorns," one of the few non contemporaneous pictures on which the Chantrey money has ever been expended, for it was originally exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1825; Charles William Wyllie's "Digging for Bait," Joseph Knight's "A Tidal River" and Thomas Matthews Rooke's "The Story of Ruth." That same year Lord Leighton's fine piece of sculpture, "An Athlete," was bought.

The work of J. M. Swan, "The Prodigal Son," for instance, is one, the writer of the article says, which will stand the market's test of the purchasers' efficiency, for Bond street would gladly restore to the Chantrey fund the £700 which was paid for the picture in 1889; and of how many modern pictures could the same be said? But it is a worthy example of a great artist whom the hierarchy of paint can ill afford to spare.

Another Handel

Dr. Richard Strauss, the composer of "Salome," "Elektra," etc., has been moved to enthusiasm by the composition of a 13-year-old boy, Eric Korngold, son of a Viennese musical critic. These works include a sonata for the piano, some pantomime music and a set of six character studies entitled "Don Quixote."

Strauss praises the boy without restraint, saying: "I have received the compositions and read them through with the greatest astonishment. The first feeling I had was of awe and apprehension, succeeded by a fervent wish that so precocious a manifestation of genius may have an opportunity for normal development. What assurance of style, mastery of form, individuality of expression and harmonization in the sonata! It is all genuinely astounding!"

He is not alone in his opinion, for Prof. Herman Kretchmer, director of the Royal High School of Music at Berlin, says: "I know of no analogous case but that of the young Handel."—Chicago Saturday Times.

If the human race is ever to reach that ideal goal, a government by love, its pathway must lie along the line traced out by the loving supremacy of woman in the home.—C. F. Corbin.

His Way

Professor Raleigh's opinion, as expressed at the Royal Institution, that negotiations between publisher and author left the author at a disadvantage, recalls Sydney Smith's short way with Messrs. Longmans. "I used to send in a bill in these words," he wrote: "'Messrs. Longman & Co. to Sydney Smith. To a very wise and witty article on such a subject; so many sheets at forty guineas a sheet;' and the money always came." It was well to be an "Edinburgh Reviewer" in Sydney Smith's time!—London Standard.

Butterfly Farming

One of the strangest methods of making money, a writer in Chambers Journal points out, is surely the raising of butterflies in the same manner as one runs a poultry farm. Yet in Europe there are several such establishments, and they have attained a degree of great prosperity. One in France rose from very humble beginnings to an extensive industry, while there is a flourishing farm on the southeastern outskirts of London. Here in the early spring may be seen as many as 40,000 or 50,000 caterpillars and pupae, while in the summer there may be thousands of butterflies of every conceivable color and beauty flitting about the various houses in which they are caged.

This novel nursery covers an acre or so, and the strange stock is housed in large cages built around trees, so disposed as to provide inside conditions as analogous to those of nature as possible. In addition, there are numerous smaller cages of a portable character, which, with their strange contents, can be moved about from point to point as desired, and attached to the trees. In extensive glass houses are cultivated hosts of plants and flowers of great variety, on which the caterpillars and butterflies can move about at their own sweet will. The farm is carried out on lines very similar to those in orchid cultivation, and assistants are retained for scouting various parts of the country for new specimens. The product of the farm is sold to entomologists.—Exchange.

The Panama Canal

WORK on the Panama canal in its magnitude would surprise any man who saw it for the first time," remarked W. M. Hood of Virginia, representative of a Cincinnati house, at the Raleigh, says the Washington Post.

"I spent two months there this year, and my first view of the big ditch almost took my breath away. The efforts of the French to dig the canal were pygmylike compared to what our people are doing. This is illustrated in the difference in size of the cars and engines used to haul away the dirt. It would be possible almost to place one of the French engines in the cab of an American locomotive now in use.

"We have 35,000 men at work, and the payroll is $1,500,000 a month, or 42 tons of money. The dirt is flying so fast that it is marvelous. There are 380 engines and 3400 cars at work, and the time required to unload 40 cars is less than 15 minutes.

"The great work, of course, is in the Culebra cut, which will take longer to complete than any other part of the ditch. It requires digging down through 85 feet of solid rock, to a base of 400 feet. They are using a ton of dynamite every day on this work alone.

"I have not the slightest doubt that the canal will be completed by 1915. Colonel Goethals is the best man that could be found to superintend the work. He is on the job every minute, and can be seen any day at 6:30 in the morning at some part of the canal."

Harry Lauder and Sunday

A correspondent of the Christian World states, on the authority of Harry Lauder's solicitor, that the well-known comic singer has, on more occasions than one, testified in unmistakable fashion to his regard for Sunday. "He was ready to break off altogether the negotiations concerning a recent American tour because of the inclusion of Sunday concerts. As concluded, the contract left him £200 a week the poorer on account of his refusal to appear in a music hall on the day of rest. Reverence for the day also characterizes his home life, and he has in this regard a sympathetic helpmeet in his wife. Mr. Lauder, as is pretty well known, has sung sacred solos time and again in Scottish churches on Sunday evenings." Mr. Lauder's youngest son is at present training for the English bar.—Exchange.

WHEN Emerson bade us present the truth to people in rough shocks perhaps he had in mind specially that class of social bugbears, the supersensitive folks. To mollycoddle people of this temperament is fatal. They thrive on sympathy, and their most relished pabulum is humble pie, albeit enjoyed by proxy, eaten by the innocent and unfortunate persons who have unintentionally touched the sensitive plant along its ill-padded spine. Thin-skinned people more often than not pride themselves on this sensitiveness, without in the least seeing that it is but a refined form of egotism. Self-assertion is not the only kind of vanity. That nature which withdraws and withholds itself as being a little more delicate and reserved and high-toned than other people is often more compact of self-love than boisterous conceit. And, strange as it may seem, the extremely sensitive folk do not fight half so shy of the sensibilities of others as the less self-conscious and more generous people.

What is hurt when our "feelings" suffer is self-love. If we are selfless we shall not note, though one stuck us as full of pins as a porcupine is of quills. This is not because we are pachyderms, but because we are, as Paul said, absent from the body—the body of the earthly personal selfhood. He has gone far in the path to peace for whom no petty slight or innuendo or scoff or sneer even intentionally directed has power to invade harmony. Such things are lost in the full flow of his inward song even as the dull noises of the street are flooded out of hearing by music. Let one's song only be loud and clear and steady enough, and the strife of tongues for him is stilled.—M. L. B.

PRACTICAL REFORMATION

FOR many years past a goodly portion of the world's thought has been given to formulating plans intended to rectify the civil, social and religious wrongs bearing down upon our civilization. So numerous and varied have been the methods proposed and so strenuously recommended by various adherents that modern thought becomes bewildered in their contemplation. In spite of all these redemptive measures, however, and of the efforts made to put into practise some of their recommendations, the evils aimed at seem to continue in their wonted course, and the reason for failure lies, no doubt, in the fact that most of the schemes suggested aim to destroy collective error instead of individual error, and furthermore seek to do this through legislation. In this they lose sight of the fact that as evil is primarily expressed through individuals it must be attacked there to prevent collective manifestation; and here is where Christian Science proves effective.

It is self-evident that if the individual members of a community are right the community, state and nation will be right; selfish competition will cease, wars end, and the kingdom of heaven will be manifestly at hand. It may be said in this connection that all religious beliefs aim to do individual work, and while this is true, still the method of handling error in Christian Science is quite different from that of other systems and enables the individual to actually destroy in its incipiency the error that may seek to express itself through him, thus giving him dominion and mastery over self.

It is self-evident, therefore, that with individual error corrected there will be no collective error to legislate against. So it will be seen that it all points back to the individual, and notwithstanding that Christianity has always taught individual reformation it has remained for Christian Science to emphasize the fact that true Christianity is the panacea for all human ills.

The disinclination of the individual to correct errors of self makes it easy for him to accept reformatory measures dealing with error in the aggregate. For instance, think of the time, thought and energy devoted to the settlement of the difficulties between labor and capital. Think of the laws and legislation enacted therefor. Think of the political parties organized and tax schemes launched. Think of how all these have failed to solve the question, and then think of the simple solution of it all offered by Christ Jesus, "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

One of the United States labor commissioners, after investigating labor troubles, in making his report said, in substance, that if the golden rule were applied the situation would be much improved. Christian Science is showing mankind the necessity of living this rule, and is convincing them that not only is the golden rule compatible with the successful transaction of business, but it absolutely solves all business problems and thereby increases prosperity and happiness. To some it is a matter of wonder that Christian Science conversion is a matter of such permanency, but this is easily understood when it is explained that the Christian Scientist has become convinced that his health, happiness and prosperity are dependent upon his character and that to do otherwise than constantly seek the highest is to work against his own well-being. This understanding develops persistent, continuous right activity, which is constantly overcoming evil with good and blessing all mankind. Christian Science not only shows the absolute necessity of total abandonment of all sin and repentance therefor, but it instructs the individual how to protect himself from temptation of all kinds and gives him the ability to express the mind of Christ.

It is acknowledged by many profound thinkers that the universe is governed and controlled by divine Intelligence, and Christian Science maintains the reasonable proposition that in the degree that this Intelligence is manifested among mortals a higher state of order and harmony prevails. Manifestly, then, the thing for mortals to do is to strive for closer communion with the Mind of the Master, which is the only true reformatory power.

Isaiah, prophetically speaking of the effects of government by the divine Mind, says: "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." In this connection Mrs. Eddy says on page 340 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," "One infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfils the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself'; annihilates pagan and Christian idolatry;—whatever is wrong in social, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the sexes; annuls the curse on man, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed." Thus it will be realized that Mrs. Eddy has given the world in Christian Science the one and only true plan for reformation. How comprehensive a remedy, and yet how simple! In loving tenderness Christian Science says to earth's weary ones, perplexed and confused with the multiplicity of plans offered for salvation, "Acquaint now thyself with Him and be at peace."

Scenery as an Asset

THAT the Governor of New Hampshire has issued a general amnesty to all men running motor cars is the sense of an article in an exchange, which discovers in the invitation of the Governor to all automobilists to make themselves at home in his state and on his highways, the more especially in his hotels and restaurants, the act of an astute and practical statesman. Whereas in the beginning the drivers of cars were sometimes wild with the novelty and excitement of their new toy, in present fact they have been sufficiently disciplined by sad experience that they are now actually most desirable guests in any community. They are liberal patrons of hostelries and good roads unroll themselves before their whirring wheels. It is estimated that $14,000,000 was left in New Hampshire last year by tourists, proving that territory set on edge and mounting skyward by leaps and bounds is not so much less lucrative than the flat wheat lands or broad green pastures. The people with motor cars left the greater part of this golden summery harvest.

Here is where the general goodness of things works out. The motoring folk have a good time and the non-motoring folk make money and in the winter may spend it for their own pleasures, no doubt. None of us lives and prospers to himself.

Americans at Cambridge and Oxford

Oliver Wendell Holmes has left on record his impressions of the ordeal at Cambridge from which Mr. Roosevelt has emerged so triumphantly. The undergraduates greeted Dr. Holmes with shouts of "Home, Sweet Home!" and clamored for a speech.

The play upon my name was not absolutely a novelty to my ear, but it was good-natured, and I smiled, and made a faint inclination, as much as to say, "I hear you, young gentlemen, but I do not forget that I am standing on my dignity, especially now since a new degree has added a moral cubit to my stature." It was not indifference to the warmth of my welcome, but a feeling that I had no claim to address the audience because some of its younger members were too demonstrative.

The following week he faced the Oxford undergraduates, when "the only chaffing I heard was the question from one of the galleries, 'Did he come in the One Hoss Shay?' at which there was a hearty laugh, joined in as heartily by myself."—Exchange.

Mr. Roosevelt has well said that the difference between semi-barbarism and civilization is the difference between good and poor means of communication.

In every person who comes near you look for what is good and strong. Honor that, rejoice in it, and, as you can, try to imitate it and your faults will drop—John Ruskin.

From Railroad Track to President's Desk

Two men who have risen to be railroad presidents began life at the very humblest kind of work. One started in running a wheelbarrow in the mines, the other at driving spikes on the Central Vermont railroad. This is Daniel Willard, now president of the Baltimore & Ohio, the other is F. D. Underwood, who became president of the Erie railroad. Other examples of this kind exist to show what hard work can do for a man. Especially of Mr. Willard it is said that success has not changed him in the least. He is exactly the same man he always was, and merely does the work of each new stage of his career just as he drove the spikes—as well as he possibly can.

Mistress of the Robes

The office of mistress of the robes is, in the case of a queen consort, not a political appointment. The Dowager Duchess of Leeds, for instance, held it all through the reign of William IV. The Duchess of Buccleuch—the second Duchess of Buccleuch to fulfil these high duties—has been mistress of the robes, with an occasional interregnum, since 1883. Her retirement has been for some while in contemplation. Her successor is to be looked for in the Duchess of Portland, or, with greater likelihood, in her niece the Duchess of Devonshire, whose marriage connected the Cavendishes and the Fitzmaurices.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Reports of Commissions and the People

A PRELIMINARY report has been filed by Senator Lodge on the results of the investigation by the committee on the high cost of living. The announcement is made without a smile that from this special report Republican campaign orators can draw powerful conclusions. We are also vouchsafed the information that the language will be of a character likely to be somewhat helpful in the coming campaign. Great as our interest must be in anything that is said or written by the senior senator from Massachusetts, it must be overshadowed by our knowledge of the fact that the chairman of the committee on the cost of living is not sent to Washington for the purpose of furnishing campaign material to a political party. He is permitted to enjoy the duties of a senator that he may serve a constituency beside whom the Republican and Democratic parties become ridiculous, the people of the United States. In this young century many new and highly interesting things are being tried, explained to the people and adopted. Even the snowy path of politics is swept the cleaner by the besom of advance; even statesmen, indurated and experienced though they be, are being taught like little children to lisp new things. There was a time, not so long ago, when the reform of the federal civil service was spoken of with a certain large contempt and its advocates treated with not much respect; there was a time when the prosecution of officials in the postoffice was dismissed with a word or two of slang; there was a time when a President of the United States made the remark that "a cheap coat makes a cheap man." All these things were, and undisturbed the world moved on.

We think that the great moral phenomenon that is now in travail is that statesmen will grasp the fact that the people mean what they say. Astounding as this may be to those that love the gospel of party, nevertheless they had best grasp it thoroughly, for it is to be a component factor in their lives hereafter. The people meant what they said, they understood the consequences of their own actions, when, in the press, in conversation with each other, in their communications to congressmen, they made it plain that for some reason or other there was too great a strain placed upon their livelihood. This was recognized, and at least its plausibility acknowledged when Congress appointed a committee such as this of which Mr. Lodge is chairman. Whether the contention of the people be right or wrong it is not germane to discuss here; that question will be settled by the fitness of things and is in process of settlement now.

But the functions of the committee, like any other appointed in moments of great national interest in important matters, were perfectly clear. Its members were to gather facts, and as well as they might be able were to draw conclusions that should be submitted to the people. What have they done? Although they were unable to give a report on their investigations until the next session of Congress, they find time to furnish through their chairman so much of their conclusions as shall provide a political party with arguments for its spokesmen in the next election.

SINCE the aviators of America in convention assembled at New York found such broad differences of opinion existing among their numbers that they finally "agreed to disagree," after which they founded two rival organizations, the public is now wondering if it holds true at all times that "birds of a feather flock together."

Winning the Race

THE eyes of the college and athletic worlds are upon the American river Thames, where selected crews of two of our great educational institutions are to contest for supremacy at the oars. One cannot but be interested in accounts from the rival training quarters as to the work of the contestants, for they typify unity of effort by individuals to an end other than mere personal glory. They are working for the fair name of the university they represent. An English enthusiast who especially admired the achievements of one oarsman that had won the Diamond Sculls at Henley several times tried to get the oarsman to explain his method of rowing. But the giant was a modest giant and quiet, and did not care to talk about his work. At last, overcome by the good-natured persistence of his enthusiastic acquaintance, he consented to explain the secret of his victories. What, then, breathlessly asked the enthusiast, was it? "Well, you know, one must row very hard, all the time."

It is not related whether this answer was quite as satisfactory as had been hoped, but it speaks volumes to those who care to read between the lines. If we put into whatever we are doing the steady endeavor that this oarsman used to win the Diamond Sculls, and that the Harvard and Yale crews put into their work at New London, we shall have the good result of work well done. Whether we get what is called the prize is of secondary consideration. We have arrived, when we know that we have "rowed very hard, all the time"; we shall then be in a position to affirm that every stroke has been taken in the best way and has counted. This system, followed honestly, means quality, in making a violin or a pick-axe. It means not at all that strenuousness that almost asks a rainbow to make a noise or be a failure in the heavens, but that never-ending regard for the high things that clears our vision.

It was said of the Duke of Wellington that he did his duty as a horse eats his oats. There was every day with duty to be done, as much as air to be breathed and light to be seen, not as a thing apart but as parcel of that twenty-four hours. Therefore, the conclusion must follow that duty was to be done without any parade, and it was done. It is not every man that takes for his applause the silent approval of an idea, but he that can never stands thereafter dependent on an audience. The strength of such an attitude is at once apparent; the man that does this does not have to satisfy himself with a career by deputy; he is a freeman because he has done what is right.

"Sport for sport's sake," is a good maxim. It is the doing that rewards, and not the prize, which is after all but a token that a certain preponderance has made one what is called a "victor." In wholesome sports, everybody wins; nobody can lose that does his duty; were it otherwise, we should have to use a logic of superlatives and create a sort of Esperantic, universal race of winners that could never lose. The trophy hunter takes up more room than he deserves, and becomes very easily a pronounced nuisance. He exists with us too much today and if left to himself will spoil all generous sport, turning amusement into jealous work. So let us cheer these sixteen young men at New London; let us hope that having begun on the Thames they will "row very hard, all the time," along the brave stream of duty and honor.

He does not "carry a big stick," see?
His words aren't charged with force and flame;
A "smooth," not a "rough rider" he,
And still he gets there just the same.

Redemption of the Taft Pledges

A REVIEW of the work of the present session of Congress will show that with few exceptions all of the measures advocated and recommended by the President will have been enacted. Conspicuous among those that have been left over are the bill for the creation of a central bank and the mail subvention bill. But included in the list of important measures passed are the railroad bill, the conservation bill, the statehood bill and the postal savings bank bill, toward the enactment of which the President has directed his energy and his influence. He stood pledged to the strengthening of the interstate commerce commission and he has carried through the provision creating a commerce court and the provision creating a special committee to investigate the extent to which railroad stocks are watered. He has been compelled to contend against powerful influences and almost innumerable obstacles in his efforts to secure the passage of a postal savings bank law, but he has won the fight. There were times when it appeared next to impossible that he would be able to redeem the pledge he had made to the two remaining territories, but he has succeeded here also. From a Congress disturbed to a great degree by factional disputes he has been able to exact much corrective and useful legislation. Nearly every branch of the public service will be improved by the work of the session, and much of this work was outlined and recommended by the executive.

By no means least among the President's triumphs is the provision made for the maintenance of the tariff board. High-tariff men and revisionists alike are agreed that the carrying through of the idea behind this board will mean inevitably a radical change in the method of framing our tariff laws and a radical change in the tariff itself. Recognition of this fact made it all the more difficult for the President to save one of the few redeeming features of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. But stubborn adherence to the point that the party platform was committed to a measure of this kind, and stubborn insistence upon his right to make good his ante-election promises to the people, in which the party tacitly concurred, helped him to include this among his victories.

It will be held, no doubt, that in some regards he might have done better, but considering the dissension in his party and the repeated attacks upon the organization in both houses, it must be admitted by fair-minded people that he has done remarkably well.

A NEW idea regarding the importance of duty seems to be taking possession of the nation's office-holders. President Taft was "too busy" to attend the commencement day exercises at Yale, where his son was graduated, and now Governor Hughes finds he is "too busy" to accept ex-President Roosevelt's invitation to visit at Oyster Bay this week. Now that men in high places are adopting as their working motto: "Business before pleasure," many others can emulate their example with profit.

Judson Harmon for President

NOT content with renominating him for the governorship, the Ohio Democracy, through the medium of its state convention, has named Judson Harmon as its choice as a presidential candidate in 1912. If he should carry Ohio next fall, and by a rousing majority, there would be scarcely a doubt with regard to the weight which the action of the state Democracy would have in the councils of the national party in this connection; should Ohio stand by the administration of Ohio's other favorite and more famous son, William Howard Taft, it is equally certain that, to say the least, Governor Harmon's name would be moved very far down in the list of Democratic eligibles.

As matters stand at present, however, Governor Harmon is not only a very popular man in his own party and in his own state, but he is regarded as being a very strong man by the opposition everywhere. It became necessary for the Ohio Democrats in order to show their preference for him as a standard bearer to display a coldness of attitude toward the present national leader, Mr. Bryan. There is reason to believe that this of itself will bring back to the party many who wandered away from it because of their indisposition to accept the Bryan issues. Moreover, it is openly admitted on the Republican side that Judson Harmon's brand of Democracy is of the kind which thousands of dissatisfied Republicans would find it no difficult matter to adopt, especially if the Republican party shall be forced by the majority to cling in the next campaign to high protection and other doctrines which have of late become obnoxious to the radical element.

It will be necessary, before indulging in speculation that is likely to be profitable with regard to Mr. Harmon and his future, to learn first of all whether or not his state wishes to continue him in the Governor's chair for another two years. If it does, then it may be taken for granted that the name of Harmon will become a very prominent one in the politics of the country long before Mr. Taft's term expires.

DOUBTLESS it will not be difficult for most people to remember that when Arizona and New Mexico are finally admitted to full membership in the American Union—perhaps a year hence—the full quota of states will then be represented on the nation's flag by an even four dozen stars, unless Oklahoma by continuing and accentuating her rather eccentric and unconventional manner of doing things shall prefer to be depicted as a comet.

IF the young women college graduates of the land follow the excellent advice which a company of distinguished speakers are offering them in commencement day addresses, it seems certain that when they go forth into the world every mother's daughter of them will acquit herself like a man.

An Important Convention for Boston

THE international congress of chambers of commerce, in session in London, Eng., has accepted by acclamation an invitation to make Boston its meeting place in 1912, and the acceptance is none the less welcome to this city, and will be none the less welcome to the country at large, because it followed an address by Sir Alfred Edmund Bateman, a representative of Downing street at the gathering, in which he said it would be a matter of satisfaction to the British government if the next meeting was held in Boston, which he regarded as the "hub" of culture as well as a great city of commerce. The whole incident is complimentary to Boston and will serve to give additional weight to the oft-repeated comment of the stranger within the walls, to the effect that Boston is not fully conscious of its high standing as a community at home and abroad or of the opportunities which its wide and exceptional reputation makes possible.

However this may be, the delegates appear to have been unanimous in the opinion that Boston would fit naturally and gracefully with the group of cities—including Liege, Milan, Prague and London—in which their congresses have already been held. These gatherings are rather representative than large, the attendance averaging not more than 400, but their importance is everywhere recognized. The first congress of the organization to be held on American soil should certainly equal if it does not surpass in interest any held elsewhere. All questions of international concern come properly within the province of discussion at these biennial meetings. No country is more fruitful than this in topics calculated to call forth an instructive interchange of views, and in no other country can questions of international policy and comity be handled with wider latitude and greater freedom. When we add that in no city anywhere is the atmosphere more congenial than in Boston for enlightened controversy of all kinds, we shall have found a sufficient reason for the selection just made.

Aviation on a Commercial Basis

THE final triumph of the airship, no matter what its type, will lie in its ability to make a place for itself in the workaday world. Toys, it is true, have their uses and their value, even in a commercial sense, but they never cease to be toys and they never come to rank as actual necessities in human regard. In the last analysis, inventions are esteemed and are recognized in the world's activities in proportion to the degree of utility that they develop. An invention to be in every sense successful must, when once applied, become indispensable.

It will be recalled that in the beginning of the series of experiments that have given us the dirigible balloon and the aeroplane in their present advanced stage, the disposition was to measure the value of the machines by their possible adaptability to the uses of warfare. Gradually the minds of the inventors and the public alike have come to measure their value by their possible adaptability to the world's peaceful pursuits, and this change of thought seems to have manifested itself simultaneously on both sides of the Atlantic. In Europe, as in the United States, interest aroused by the remarkable feats in aeronautics recently accomplished is now centering on the practicability of commercializing the airship. It is in response to the demand thus created that Count Zeppelin has just given another wonderful demonstration of the carrying capacity and speed of a dirigible machine, the net result of which is summed up in this passage from the cabled report: "Count Zeppelin demonstrated the advantage of an air route in the section of the country traversed. The Deutschland (carrying twenty passengers) cut the railroad time one third between Mannheim and Dusseldorf (136 miles), covering the distance in four hours, the railway express time being six hours."

In this country prizes are now being offered aviators who shall make similar demonstrations with aeroplanes. This is logically the next step in air navigation. We are all satisfied that longer voyages than any thus far made by aeroplanes or dirigibles are possible. What we are all desirous of learning now is whether the airship can be commercialized, and most of us are beginning to believe that it can, and that the advancement in the next few years in air navigation will be as great and as striking as that which has occurred in the development of the present established systems of land and water transportation.

THE present more-than-a-billion-dollar-session of Congress shows that as an economist "Uncle Sam" is not a happy success. It is obvious that the much discussed spirit of "conservation" has not reached as far as his pocket-book.

The Demand for a Tariff Commission

THIS newspaper was among the first in the country to advocate the idea of a tariff commission, as it has been among the most insistent in claiming that through the medium of such a body only could the tariff question be removed beyond the dominion and influence of partizan politics. As a step in this direction, like other friends of honest tariff revision and thorough tariff reform, we have accepted the tariff board created by the Payne tariff law. It is highly encouraging to find now that popular interest in this matter has grown to such an extent that the National Tariff Commission Association, composed of business men throughout the United States, is able to muster 85,000 members in protesting against the continued agitation during the summer on the tariff, in connection with the congressional elections.

What this association demands is that a body be created which, as Senator Beveridge said, shall have plenary power to "dig deep into" the entire tariff question, with the view of adjusting the questions involved on a sane and just business basis. The hope of all those who would remove this matter from political discussion and have it treated solely as a question of concern to the trade and commerce of the country is that popular interest in the creation of a tariff commission shall continue to grow until by the time the next Congress comes together there will be no excuse in political circles for ignoring it.

BY THE establishing of a "Monte Carlo" near Havana, perhaps one more institution of the old world will be matched in a measure by something to be found in the new. However of that kind of "attraction" America could well afford to let Europe enjoy an undisputed monopoly.
